ISRAEL ASKS UN AID IN SYRIA INCIDENTS

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Israel has instructed its representative at the United Nations to request Secretary-General Thant's intervention in the "grave situation" along this country's border with Syria, government officials said today.

They said Ambassador Michael Comay planned to ask Thant to call on Syria to halt a series of border incidents in which six Israelis have been wounded by gunfire since last Thursday. The shooting came from Syrian border positions, it was charged.

"YIPEE, I WON!"—That's what little Laurian Wallis seems to be saying. And this delightful shot of her on the swings at Willow Beach last month gained a first prize for her father, Graham, of 3401 Browning

VIET NAM TALKS URGED

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Secretary-General U Thant called today for a new Geneva conference on Viet Nam. He said that "even at this late hour" a conference might offer some chance of solution to end the war in Viet Nam.

Thant told a press conference that if an agreement were worked up by the parties principally concerned, the United Nations could play a role in seeing that the agreement is carried out.

Fortune In Gems Stolen

SHANNON, Ireland (AP)—A $288,400 shipment of uncut diamonds was reported stolen from Shannon Airport over the weekend in a move so smooth the loss was not discovered for 48 hours.

Interpol, the international police organization, was asked to help solve the disappearance of the diamonds, flown Friday from Amsterdam.

Loss of the gems was discovered Tuesday night when a representative of the consignees, the Ennis Diamond Company of Shannon, called for the shipment.

He was told a well-dressed man speaking with a foreign accent called at the AER Linrus freight office Sunday. They said the man said he was from the diamond company and, as everything appeared in order, signed the necessary documents and was handed the package.

Fox's confession came in

SOLD U.S. PROCESS TO ITALIAN FIRM

Wonder-Drug Piracy Role Admitted

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Sidney Martin Fox, alleged "mastermind" in a multi-million dollar drug piracy case, today admitted he had stolen secret antibiotic cultures and process information from the American Cyanamid Company and sold them to an Italian drug firm.

Fox's confession came in an affidavit filed in New York state supreme court in support of Cyanamid's $5,000,000 suit against Maurice Rosenblatt, a consultant for the Italian company, Lederle S.P.A. of Milan.

Fox stated Lederle knowingly paid $105,000 for the stolen drugs and information. He admitted he received $55,000 and Rosenblatt $15,000. Rosenblatt acted as an intermediary in the sale.

Fox also stated he hoped to realize upwards of $300,000 from the Italian firm for the stolen properties which he obtained during his employment by Cyanamid's Lederle laboratories at Pearl River, N.Y., and later through other Lederle employees after he left the company in 1959. Lederle spent some $10,000,000 to develop the "wonder drugs" involved in the thefts.

Fox's confession was the latest development in the years-long case of industrial espionage and patent piracy that has been handled by federal and state courts in several suits. Rosenblatt is the sole defendant in the New York State supreme court case.

A resident of Italy, he has been served a subpoena but rejected jurisdiction of the New York court on grounds that actions described in the suit occurred abroad. Fox's statement today claims they also occurred in New York.

The sales of Lederle's secrets were facilitated by the fact that some foreign countries do not have effective patent protection laws.

At least the new members of the Commonwealth avoid one problem Mike's an expert on—they march into independence with their own flags already flying.

WORK FRIDAY?

Alberni On Verge Of Accord

By FRANK RUTTER
The Alberni Valley strike today teetered on the verge of a settlement that would put the lumber industry into full production again on Friday.

Both company and union officials have agreed to Premier W. A. C. Bennett's settlement terms, but they are still deadlocked on a last-minute technicality.

The Office Workers' International Union will withdraw its pickets if MacMillan, Blodget and Powell River Co. will drop its legal action for a government order that other unions cease their tieup of company operations.

The company will withdraw its legal action if the union calls off its pickets.

PICK UP MARBLES?

Deputy Labor Minister W. H. Sands was trying to solve the deadlock in meetings still under way at Vancouver at press time.

Mr. Bennett, meanwhile, called on the company to give in.

"When the game is over you pick up your marbles and go home," he said. But there was no reply.

The premier's settlement ultimatum issued Monday night was accepted by company chairman J. V. Clyne without conditions.

TWO CONDITIONS

William Lowe, representative of the union, accepted with two conditions: that the company halt its legal action before the provincial labor relations board and that the union membership votes for it.

He said he could assemble 60 striking office workers and complete a vote within a matter of hours.

Company officials said today that the Alberni Valley plants could be back in full production within 36 hours of a formal settlement.

One said he expected the legal issue would be resolved later today and the pulp and paper plant at Port Alberni would be in full operation by noon Friday.

HEARING DELAYED

Labor relations board hearings on the company's charges that four unions have illegally restricted production by refusing to cross office worker picket lines were adjourned until 10 a.m. Thursday in the hope that all will be settled by then.

Mr. Sands and Mr. Lowe met most of this morning in an attempt to clear the snag.

"We are on the verge," said a company spokesman.

Mr. Clyne, after sending a telegram to the premier—accepting his settlement proposals, said there should be an immediate withdrawal of pickets and everyone should return to work.

He said the premier's proposals were "in accord with the company's position throughout."

EMPLOYEES FREE

This was that freedom of employees to decide themselves if they would join the union should be maintained.

The union wanted a closed shop.

Mr. Bennett's plan was that a majority of employees must be union members, that no present union members would lose their jobs, and that all employees would pay union dues. The matter of wages would be settled by a government arbiter.

Meanwhile, despite today's snag, there was rejoicing in the Alberni Valley that the end is in sight.

There was free beer Tuesday night in Alberni beer parlors.

WING DING

Mayor Fred Bishop said there would be "a wing ding of a party" if anyone has any money left.

The company's charges before the labor relations board are that the International Woodworkers of America, the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Electrical Workers and United Paper Makers unions were illegally restricting production in the valley.

Blast Kills 20

BOMBAY (UPI)—A mysterious explosion rocked the town of Aurangabad today, killing 20 persons, injuring 30 others and destroying a dozen houses.

Ottawa Asked To Aid

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia today launched a three-river power policy.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced that the federal government will be asked "forthwith" to share in the cost of a multi-million-dollar flood control project on the upper reaches of the Fraser River.

He said dams constructed under the project would be capable of generating hydroelectric power. The area was capable of generating one million horsepower.

Despite heavy criticism in the past, the government has worked on a two-river policy simultaneous development of the Peace and Columbia Rivers for hydro-electric power. Now Mr. Bennett has added a third river. Total cost of all projects is in the billions.

He said the request for federal aid will be made on the basis of a report earlier this year from the Fraser River Board—a federal-provincial body—which called for a $38 million flood control system that would involve eight dams and a diversion of the Upper Fraser.

PROTECT VALLEY

He said the flood control measures are necessary to protect the 100-mile Fraser Valley on the Lower Mainland which eventually "will be the most expensive bit of real estate in all Canada."

He said under B.C. proposals the federal and provincial governments would share the cost of the flood control features of the project with the balance charged to hydro development. The system would be designed to prevent flooding such as that in 1948 when $30,000,000 damage was done by the rampaging Fraser.

Mr. Bennett made his announcement at a government breakfast given for the B.C. Investment Dealers Association where he announced a $50 million parity bond issue by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority.

SALMON SAFE?

He said there would be no dams on the lower Fraser River, upon which much of the province's multi-million dollar salmon industry is partially dependent.

Preliminary discussions had already been held with the federal government and "now we want the talks to get into high gear." The federal government would be expected to pay 50 per cent of the flood control aspects of the project.

Mr. Bennett said that there had been a feeling abroad that the government was "gambling" with its two-river power policy.

$50 MILLION HYDRO BOND ISSUE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett today announced a $50,000,000 British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority parity bond issue.

The ceremony, to be held here Aug. 1, would be similar to one held in 1959 at Kelowna when the premier announced that the province was free of direct debt.

The premier said $36,500,000 worth of Toll Bridge bonds are due Aug. 1. The government had the cash on hand to pay these off.

Parity bonds are government guaranteed bonds cashable at par at any time.

Mr. Bennett said the new $50,000,000 issue will take the government above its self-imposed limit of $212,000,000 in parities which are issued by crown agencies, not the government. The total would amount to almost $238,000,000.

However, refunding of bonds issued to pay for the B.C. Electric Company, expropriated in 1951, would bring the total parity bonds down to about $200,000,000 next year.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of Hydro, said the annual report of the Authority will be issued Thursday. However, a fact sheet issued in connection with the bond issue said that the authority had a net income of $8,948,895 for the year ending March 31. Gross revenues were $139,632,801.

Mr. Smith promoted the trip for closer liaison between Canadian and U.S. political parties.

He said the Conservative party could learn much from U.S. politics, particularly about organization.

The 30-year-old lawyer said he knows of no other official delegate from Canada to the Republican convention which opens next Monday at San Francisco's Cow Palace.

There will be 1,308 voting delegates and alternates and about 3,000 accredited guests.

"What we need now is an empty garage or some other storage space to house the donations until Mrs. Crosby finds a place to live," Mr. Southwell said today.

Mrs. Christine Crosby and her seven children, ages nine years to 10-months, lost their possessions in a fire last week at 1020 Queens.

Mrs. Crosby also lost $94.50 in cash which the Welfare Department has offered to replace.

Donations are being received at the National Trust Building, 727 Fort, or may be mailed to Mr. Southwell at 2340 Arbutus Road.

be an important topic for the seven-day conference.

Nkrumah tried in pre-conference moves to make Southern Rhodesia the prime issue of the meeting by demanding the introduction of the one-man, one-vote principle in the rich self-governing colony.

Representatives of the seven African Commonwealth countries met Monday night but some reports say Nkrumah failed to get a united front for his demand that Britain intervene.

Nigeria's Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa and Uganda's Milton Obote were said to favor a moderate approach although Sierra Leone's Albert Maga told a press conference Monday: "The issue of Southern Rhodesia constitutes a challenge to the continued existence of a multi-racial Commonwealth."

Speculation persisted that an African request would be made to Britain to convene a round-table conference for all political groups in Southern Rhodesia as the only effective way to avoid disaster.

Prime Minister Douglas-Home called the 13th post-war parley in hopes of uniting the Commonwealth in a sweeping program of economic co-operation pegged to increased aid for the poorer members.

His idea is to transform the family of nations into a mutual aid society that would pool funds, personnel and technical knowledge and develop a network of nonofficial bodies in education, science and administration through a central Commonwealth foundation.

This would give a new image to the union of 750,000,000 people on five continents.

Australia, Canada and New Zealand are supporting Britain's stand that the conference should give less emphasis to the divisive questions and concentrate on those on which the members can agree.

But the Africans want a Commonwealth declaration calling for freedom of "our brothers still in bondage," as Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta of

BUDGET BYLAW PROVED IT

City Voters Matured Manager Tells Club

Victoria city voters got a pat on the back from city manager Dennis Young on Tuesday.

He praised them for the maturity they showed in voting for the capital budget bylaw recently.

Speaking at Victoria Kiwanis luncheon he said this was the first time the city had voted in a flexible plan.

This showed the voters had faith in the mayor and council to iron out the problems in this area by the setting up of the intermunicipal committee, said Mr. Young.

However, one of the main differences of a joint services board, was that it would be enacted under special legislation rather than coming into being by regional efforts, taking into account the good of the general

But the province would need all the power it could get, including that from the Fraser and Mica Dam, one of the three dams to be built on the Columbia and the only one with generating capacity.

Earlier Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of Hydro, said that B.C. has not provided for all the power it will need in the next decade.

By 1967-68 350,000 kilowatts will be available from the $700 million Peace River project now under construction. But the Hydro Authority would still have to purchase natural gas to supply its thermal plant here.

Mr. Bennett said B.C. proposes call for building several of the Fraser dams, at one time.

The Fraser River Board report warned that with each year's delay in taking protective action "the next damaging flood is that much closer."

"Accordingly, it is emphasized that remedial measures should be taken as early as possible."

It calls for construction of five dams on the Clearwater River, a part of the interior section of the Fraser system. Another would be built on the main stream of the Fraser east of Prince George and another on the Cariboo River southwest of Barkerville.

A 460-foot-high dam on the McGregor River, northwest of Prince George, would divert water in the Peace River.

Barry Flayed As Defeatist

Scranton Also Scores Smear Tactics, Threats

SAN FRANCISCO (CP-AP) — Governor William Scranton's supporters today are trying hard to pin a can't-win label on Senator Barry Goldwater, the Arizona front-runner in the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Scranton's backers have gleefully jumped on Goldwater's admission that no Republican "as of now" can beat President Johnson in the November general election.

Scranton's camp hails this as a sign of defeatism on Goldwater's part.

As the campaign began to heat up with nomination day at the Republican convention here a week away, Scranton also accused Goldwater and his managers of "steamroller tactics" including smears and ex-

EXECUTION OF BANDIT POSTPONED

Ottawa (CP) — Georges Marcotte, three times scheduled for execution as the Santa Claus bank bandit who machine-gunned two Montreal policemen, has been given another reprieve to allow a court review of his conviction.

Marcotte's lawyer, who claims his client was framed, was due in Ottawa today to give the justice department a brief on the case.

The 34-year-old carpenter was to be hanged early Friday in Montreal's Bordeaux Jail. Instead, the execution has been postponed to Sept. 25.

'Sincere Tribute' By Hotel

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Mississippi legislators moved Tuesday to limit the Robert E. Lee Hotel which closed its doors rather than comply with the new civil rights law.

The hotel, through Gov. Paul Johnson, offered free rooms for the rest of the week to lawmakers in special session.

The House adopted a resolution praising hotel officials for locking the doors rather than bowing to the provisions of the new law.

The resolution called the action "courageous," and "a sincere and outstanding tribute to southern principles and beliefs"

The resolution was offered by Rep. James Mathis of Carthage and was adopted unanimously.

The hotel, second largest here, shut its doors to transients Monday with a statement that "we can no longer operate this hotel as a public facility."

A number of restaurants also closed their doors, apparently because of the new law.

The lunchroom section of a Jackson drug store was shut down and the seats removed from the lunch counter. Similar moves were made at three variety stores here last summer following a series of sit-ins. One has re-opened offering take-out service only.

MAKARIOS BOYCOTTS GENEVA TALK

Times News Service

NICOSIA — President Makarios will not send representative to the Cyprus talks in Geneva later this week.

A statement issued by the Greek-Cypriot president here

Tuesday night said the Cyprus government did not think "any useful purpose" would be served by sending a representative to the talks, which are being held under United Nations auspices.

"On the contrary, we are afraid the procedure in Geneva, with the persistently manifested offer of help from many quarters, may divert the Cyprus question outside the framework of the United Nations," Makarios said.

PAMPHLET ATTACK

Scranton said before he left Chicago that Goldwater's people are using "every conceivable kind of pressure and threat" to keep the nomination away from him.

Contending that "every survey taken" shows that he is preferred by Republicans as the nominee over the Arizona senator, Scranton continued:

"Senator Goldwater's managers know this, so they have undertaken a no-holds-barred campaign to see to it that the delegates at the convention do not reflect the wishes of the people back home."

Sympathy Strike Hits Oil Company

VANCOUVER (CP) — A simple wage dispute between 40 employees and Vulcan Containers (Canada) Limited in suburban Surrey on Tuesday spread through sympathy action at a $20,000,000 Standard Oil refinery in nearby Burnaby and onto a 1,000-ton coastal tanker and resulted in a B.C. Supreme Court action.

The crew of the tanker, owned by Standard Oil but operated by Westward Shipping, refused to load oil from the refinery.

The crew, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers (CLC), acted in sympathy with Local 9-601 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' International Union (CLC), which is in dispute with Standard Oil over suspension of three employees who had refused to handle containers manufactured at the Vulcan plant.

The oil company's Vancouver sales service was partly interrupted Tuesday when a group of truck drivers belonging to the Teamsters Union refused to carry Standard Oil products.

Company spokesman W. P. Anderson said Tuesday night the company's operations were being seriously damaged. The refinery, normally manned by 160 men, was continuing to function on a skeleton staff of 30 supervisory personnel.

About 600 Standard service stations are involved throughout B.C., he said.

Lawyer Douglas McK. Brown, counsel for the company, Tuesday asked Mr. Justice Alkins of the B.C. Supreme Court to issue an injunction against pickets parading a block away from the refinery. The hearing was to resume today.

Trade and Argument

REPORTS FROM OTTAWA indicate that the Canadian government is seeking ways of easing difficulties which British exporters claim they are having with Canadian anti-dumping regulations. At the same time Mr. Mitchell Sharp, Canada's minister of trade and commerce, is maintaining his argument that much of the difficulty is due to "psychological barriers" which the British themselves have thrown up.

Mr. Sharp attempted to place the British-Canadian trade situation in perspective the other day in an address to the annual meeting of the British-Canadian Trade Association at Montebello, Quebec. The first point he made was that a trade imbalance between the two countries of something like two to one in Canada's favor, such as now exists, is nothing new.

Prior to the Second World War British purchases from Canada generally were two to three times the value of sales to this country, because of the fact that Britain depended on Canada for large amounts of raw materials while the relatively small Canadian population precluded any great volume market for British finished goods.

"Given the great disparity between the two countries as well as the different nature of each country's exports, it is unlikely that one could expect a balance in trade. Even during the year of the greatest imbalance—1963—Canadians on a per capita basis purchased $28 worth of British goods whereas the comparable figure for British purchases was $19," Mr. Sharp said.

Certainly this is a different way of looking at the situation. Instead of emphasizing the fact that the balance of trade runs two to one in Canada's favor, consideration might be given to the fact that Canadians as individuals bought 50 per cent more from Britain than the Britons purchased from us. But no nation, of course, can solve its balance of payments on a per capita basis.

Mr. Sharp mentioned another significant factor in the total picture when he pointed out that while the commodity trade balance is strongly in Canada's favor, it is offset to some degree by Canada's deficit with the United Kingdom on invisible transactions or services. These include travel, shipping, insurance premiums, interest and dividends and other items. Pre-war, these "invisibles" more than balanced the commodity trade deficit but with the necessity of selling off foreign assets during the war, Britain lost a good deal of this revenue from Canada.

Within the last few years the British trade situation has been made more difficult by the exigencies of the Canadian balance-of-trade problems which resulted in lowering the value of the dollar and imposing import surcharges. These two factors, Mr. Sharp believes, are really at the root of the "psychological barrier" to British imports. But, he claims, they are already becoming "items of historical interest rather than of continuing concern."

During the later months of 1963 and the first quarter of 1964 imports from Britain began to rise again. Despite this, Mr. Sharp said that when he visited Britain earlier this year, he discovered a feeling that the Canadian market was not as receptive to British goods as the British businessman had a right to expect. In fact, the Canadian market is generally well disposed to British goods, but it is a tough competitive market with high costs of distribution due to its low population density. Its opportunities demand a strong sales effort.

Vigilance in the Parks

WHEN MR. KENNETH KIERMAN some months ago announced his intention to open some wilderness parks to commercial exploitation by miners and loggers he found that he had disturbed a hornets' nest. Those citizens interested in retaining the wilderness unspoiled for their own enjoyment and that of future generations flew at him in an angry swarm.

The hornets are not settling down. Last week a meeting of 20 Greater Victoria and Vancouver Island outdoor clubs emphasized their stand against such intrusion and pledged themselves to support the principle of reservation and conservation of parklands.

Land, Lots of Land

CALGARY'S CITY COUNCIL recently learned—the hard way—that municipal governments which venture into areas of business usually reserved for private enterprise almost invariably come to grief.

Two years ago the Calgary councillors decided to open up for residential development a desirable tract of city-owned land near the city's new university. But instead of putting the land up for tenders to established private developers, council decided it would route the expected development profits into the city coffers.

Critics of the plan, including several aldermen, questioned whether the city's land department employees had the necessary knowledge of promoting and selling building lots, but the answer from the council majority was that the land was so desirable it "would sell itself."

Recently, two years after the decision to go into the real estate business, Calgary's council sadly realized it was in over its head. The record showed that in the first year of development only 60 of 500 lots had been sold and prices were 10 to 15 per cent below the anticipated levels. A few months ago, council

"We have started late, which means we shall have to fight harder," declared one spokesman, reflecting the apparent consensus of the meeting.

This is an encouraging attitude. It will be buttressed by a determination on the part of those concerned to keep a sharp eye on parks, park reservations and desirable parks property.

If this point of view remains strong, British Columbians should not be caught, as they have been caught in the past, by invasions which were well-launched and irreversible before the people of the province, particularly the lovers of the outdoors, knew that the attack was under way.

The hornets are not settling down. Last week a meeting of 20 Greater Victoria and Vancouver Island outdoor clubs emphasized their stand against such intrusion and pledged themselves to support the principle of reservation and conservation of parklands.

Such is the consensus of a mass meeting held here but unnoticed by any newspaper. The three participants—Archie, the grocery man; Ray, the garage man, and this reporter—all agreed that the news from Ottawa was incredible and slightly mad. No one was particularly surprised. In the summertime, when governments are tired, oppositions cranky and parliamentary tempers short, the news of politics is always depressing and unreal.

What distinguishes the present news is not so much its absurdity as its irrelevance.

The world's peace hangs by a chewed string in Southeast Asia. In Canada all vital decisions have been suspended for two full years since the election of 1962.

Under these critical conditions, which should concentrate our mind on essentials, Parliament is wrangling about the design of a flag, Mr. Pearson's latest slip of the tongue and a wretched television show promoted by his blundering advisers and executed with almost super-human stupidity by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Non-Essentials

Somehow Canadians have managed to concentrate their minds on all the non-essentials while neglecting every question of importance. The resulting stagnation of national business is bad enough but far worse is the damage to public confidence in the parliamentary system, in the nation itself.

If Parliament were becoming merely unpopular that wouldn't matter much and, indeed, might be a very good thing, since unpopularity expresses decision at least. But Parliament has reached a grave state when it becomes a joke, and not a funny one.

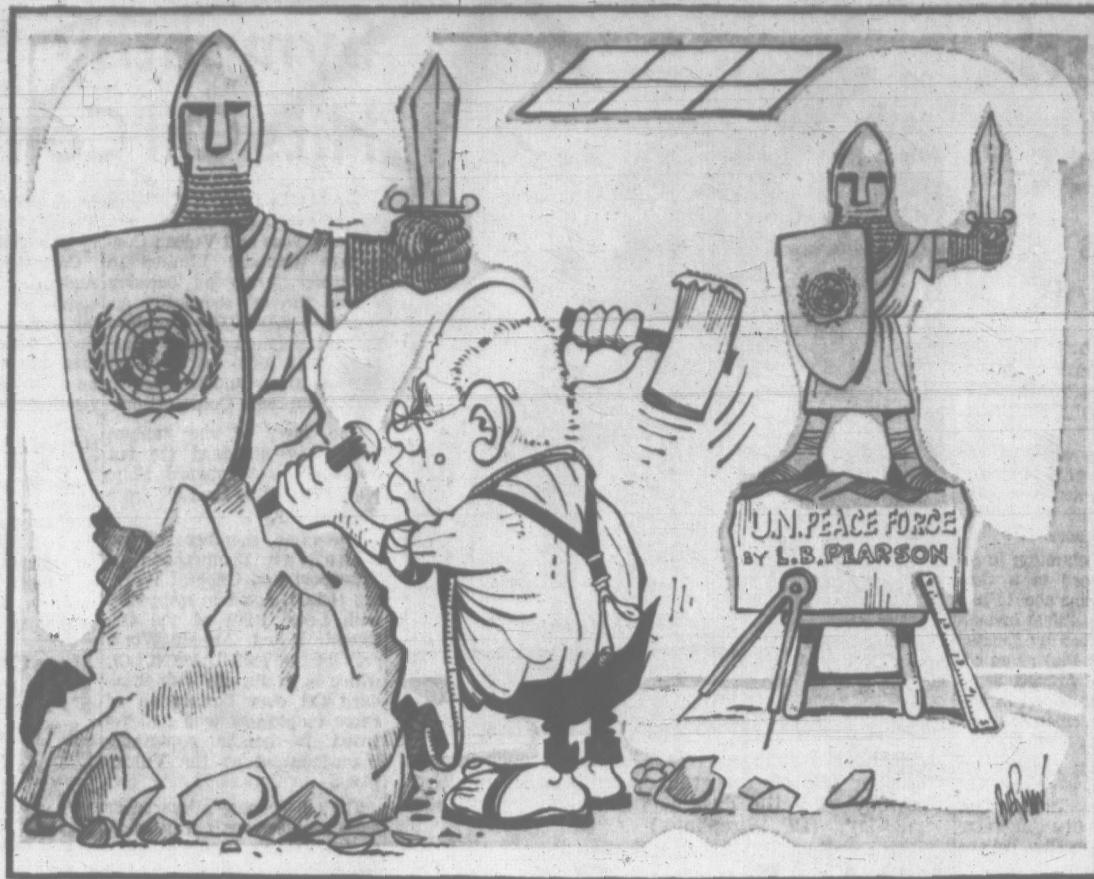

In some primitive countries, in The Congo, for instance, a similar situation would be quickly resolved by a civil war and the arrival of a dictator. Here, where the democratic tradition is fortunately stronger than its contemporary agents, the nation can stand a lot of ruin, and a lot of midsummer madness. Even here, however, there are limits.

British Columbians may tend to forget sometimes that a prosperous Prairie wheat economy is of importance to this province. The recent preliminary statement on external trade through British Columbia ports during 1963, issued by the provincial bureau of economics and statistics, shows that of the 10 leading commodities exported wheat was in the lead and accounted for 22 per cent of the total.

Moscow—Regina—Victoria

DESPITE THE ASSERTION OF Soviet Premier Khrushchev during his recent visit to Denmark that there would be no purchases of Western wheat this year, Canadian agriculture officials say they are confident that this country's farmers can count on markets for at least 370,000,000 bushels of wheat in the next crop year.

This would be about two-thirds of the record 590,000,000 bushels which will have been shipped out of the country when the current crop year ends July 31. While it is still too early to predict with any accuracy what this year's wheat

New Move in the Moscow-Peking Power Play

THIS news from Warsaw that China has decided to throw down the gauntlet and set up a formal organization, the Fourth International, to split the world Communist movement irrevocably, explains a good deal of what has lately been obscure in Eastern Europe.

The bitterness of the dispute, and the speed at which events are moving, were emphasized by a recent broadcast from Prague radio.

This attacked Peking for pursuing an aggressive policy in Laos and Vietnam with the aim of proving its thesis that war is inevitable.

As a result of the advance of pro-Communist Pathet Lao, the broadcast said, the United States had strengthened her military position, had sent military supplies to Thailand and had appointed a general as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

The alliance between the Laotian neutralists and the Pathet Lao had been broken and replaced by a rapprochement between the neutralists and the right-wing factions.

Assist War-Hungry

The Laotian premier had himself allowed the Americans to fly over the Plain of Jars. The Geneva agreements which had so far "restrained open American military intervention" had thus been upset.

Through these policies, the Chinese objectively assist the war-hungry elements in the U.S.—through these policies they seek to prove their theory about the inevitability of war... in a word: the son kills his parents and then complains that he is orphaned."

Only if he could manoeuvre or blackmail them into declaring their unreserved support of Moscow and their absolute repudiation of Peking could he hope to reassemble his disintegrating empire and restore the old familiar discipline.

He could do nothing about Rumania unless the other members of the East European bloc were reunited. The chief target then was Wladyslaw Gomulka's Poland.

At the Polish party congress in Warsaw on June 15 Gomulka, while generally supporting the Russian case, was still trying to keep the situation fluid by declaring (agreeing with the Chinese)

This is an entirely new development. It is Russian-inspired. No Czech would dare take an initiative of this kind unless instructed to do so by Moscow.

Thus the Czechs are playing Nikita Khrushchev's game which some of their neighbors, above all the Poles and the Rumanians, are feverishly trying to circumvent.

The direct saddling of China with the blame for the aggravation of the conflict in South-East Asia is an indication of the lengths to which Khrushchev is prepared to go to win his game. It is a game which has less to do with the Sino-Soviet quarrel as such than with the reassertion of Soviet control over hitherto subservient Communist parties.

Unreal Interlude

Khrushchev's Scandinavian excursion was a curiously unreal and irrelevant interlude in the middle of a tempest. He has been using all the means in his power to force the Communist parties, above all the European parties, to stand up and be counted.

Only if he could manoeuvre or blackmail them into declaring their unreserved support of Moscow and their absolute repudiation of Peking could he hope to reassemble his disintegrating empire and restore the old familiar discipline.

He could do nothing about Rumania unless the other members of the East European bloc were reunited. The chief target then was Wladyslaw Gomulka's Poland.

At the Polish party congress in Warsaw on June 15 Gomulka, while generally supporting the Russian case, was still trying to keep the situation fluid by declaring (agreeing with the Chinese) that it would take a long time to overcome present differences and that the sooner the fraternal parties composed themselves for a long and patient preparation of the grounds for an international conference, to include the Chinese, the better.

But on the very same day, Khrushchev demanded, in effect, that he should eat his words. The Soviet Communist Party sent to Peking and all the parties taking part at the Warsaw meeting a letter couched in savage and uncompromising terms declaring that an international conference would take place almost at once.

This letter, which has so far not been published (though the Chinese may be expected to publish it any day) seems to have left him with little room for manoeuvre. Khrushchev clearly returns to Scandinavia to face what is perhaps the most explosive situation of his whole career.

K's Gamble

If things had gone his way and he had succeeded in convening a meeting (which he knew very well the Chinese would refuse to attend) and if he could bulldoze his resolution through, then all the brave new aspirations of the national Communist parties to some sort of autonomy would be knocked on the head.

If he failed and was forced to temporize or find a face-saving formula, he would have lost his last chance of re-imposing his own personal dominion over the greater part of the Communist movement.

If the Warsaw report proves true, the issue is now complicated by the Chinese decision to make the break themselves.

MIRROR OF THE PUBLIC MOOD

A National Flight From Reality

AS OBSERVED from the remote wilderness where I am now exiled, the spectacle at Ottawa does not suggest that Canada needs an election, a new Parliament, or even a good five-cent cigar. No, it needs a psychiatrist.

Such is the consensus of a mass meeting held here but unnoticed by any newspaper. The three participants—Archie, the grocery man; Ray, the garage man, and this reporter—all agreed that the news from Ottawa was incredible and slightly mad. No one was particularly surprised. One Law on Divorce

Reference an article printed in your paper June 30 in "This World of Ours" under "ontreal dateline." It would be appreciated if you would publish the following letter:

Divorce:

It would appear that there was a miscarriage of justice in Montreal where a marriage of six years, no doubt, consummated; was annulled in Superior Court.

Why, in a united Canada, can rules be different for different classes of people?

There are no doubt many Canadians who have far more just cause, for annulment of marriage than lack of religious rites such as baptism.

It is felt that the archaic divorce laws, where adultery is the only means by which one can obtain divorce, should be changed, not just for one group but for all. Then so many Canadians would not have to live common law, separated, deserted, or undergo mental cruelty and physical cruelty.

It is felt that this case in particular should be appealed by the attorney-general of Canada, and then let our Canadian government straighten out a few vital laws before they spend hours and good money on trivial matters such as national emblems and bilingualism. Let us have one law for French libertines, Doukhobors, Catholics, and others.

DESERTED MALE.

Canadian Cultural War

There is no "English heritage," in Canada, any more than there is a "French heritage," as stated by Mrs. M. Lonis.

These so called cultures, are merely educational environments, one of which is of European, and the other of Phoenician origin. Apparently the freedom given to the habitant of Quebec, in matters of education and of religion, has long since been lost, as only organizations which originated outside of Canada, control the destiny of Quebec at the present time.

That is why, in the language of your correspondent, we must "be at war with those who have a different language and culture from our own," though the idea of war does not originate in western Canada. It originates from the Quebec organizations, who do not believe in the European conception of Christian freedom.

Both French and English, in my youth were taught as foreign tongues, but under the British flag and the Roman, one is advised to do as the British and the Romans. We are distinctly not Roman, however much we condemn British or Anglo Saxon practice. We are of freedom loving European ancestry, and our culture is best expressed by The Lord's Prayer, and The Sermon on the Mount.

We require no organization to understand these, but we must continually be on our guard to protect the beliefs implied in these memorable instructions.

Ardiel (foreground) and Jubiel warm up

The Question as Always: 'Which Wickheim Will Win?'

By HUMPHREY DAVY

All eyes on All-Sooke Day will be on two Sooke brothers who have caused some of the biggest splashes at international logging sports.

The largest logging festival in British Columbia opens at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Sooke River flats.

Ardiel and Jubiel Wickheim, who have had on between them won the world championship title for log birling for the past nine years, will be in the thick of the fray.

They will compete against four other loggers from V.I. and Washington for the Canadian birling championship — the art of throwing the other fellow off a twirling, bouncing log into the water.

Ardiel is the present Canadian champ, Jubiel holds the international title.

STARTS AT 2:30

The contest will take place in a pool in the centre of the sports arena at 2:30 p.m.

It will take some doing to defeat the two brothers, former boom men and now in the gravel business. Many skilled loggers from all parts of Canada and the United States have tried, only to end up in the drink.

The contest is more likely to end between the two brothers as it has for years at Sooke. But as usual, until the match is held, everyone is wondering: "Which Wickheim?"

ARDIEL FIRST

First to win the international championship for birling was Ardiel in 1955 at Spokane. He was the first Canadian to win. In previous years the competition had always been won by U.S. loggers.

TWO DEATHS INVESTIGATED

NANAIMO—Coroner Russell Inkster has ordered inquiries into the recent deaths of two persons.

One, Henry Green, 21, was hit by a car on a crosswalk at Nicol and Needham last November. He died in hospital here last week.

The other, William Boerwinkle of Comox, died in his parked car on the Island Highway last weekend.

V.I. ROUNDUP

Pilot Injured In Copter Crash

QUALICUM—A 31-year-old Campbell River man was rushed to Nanaimo Hospital by helicopter on Tuesday after his own copter crashed into the sea about six miles north of here.

Glyn Fitzgerald, a pilot for Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. in Campbell River, is in satisfactory condition with head injuries.

His craft hit the water about a mile off shore from Qualicum Bay.

A department of transport helicopter from Pat Bay, out over the area on a routine flight, went to his aid.

Fitzgerald was found hanging on to the pontoon of his own craft.

Transport officials were today still trying to trace the cause of the mishap.

The copter was kept afloat by its own pontoons and was towed to land by a rented boat.

Cost of replacing the machine would be about $60,000.

TOFINO—In the 24 hours beginning 5 a.m. Monday, 3.6 inches of rain were measured in the government's meteorological station at the airport here.

It was still raining heavily through Tuesday and winds were gusting up to 35 miles an hour.

DUNCAN—Six more directors will be added to Cowichan Valley Forest Museum Society in the near future, bringing the total directorship to 15.

Next meeting of the society will be held at the end of July when directors will set a definite date for the museum's official opening.

DUNCAN—The new $15,000 air-conditioning unit in the Odeon Theatre will begin operating tonight with the opening of Tom Jones.

The new unit is part of the theatre chain's $600,000 renovation plan throughout B.C.

POWERFUL OUTPUT

Piano Duo Shows Dynamic Quality

By AUDREY S.D. JOHNSON

Two piano work is sometimes considered to belong in the realm of chamber ensemble performance, which suggests the ideal setting as a small recital hall with artists and audience in close proximity.

In the case of duo pianists Homer Simmons and George Scharl, the reverse is indicated.

Monday night, before an immensely appreciative and musical audience they presented a meaty program in the lower lounge of the Empress Hotel. Their performance was of such percussive and dynamic quality, their output of tone so powerful that I found myself wishing that I might hear them in some better acoustical accommodation, such as the Royal Theatre.

OVERPOWERED

There was a sense of the ear being overpowered by the great declamatory sound and some consequent loss of aural perspective.

Both Simmons and Scharl are highly virtuosic in their technical command, an extremely well matched team, commanding almost unbelievable degrees of crescendo and fortissimo.

They are most impressive when building climax upon climax and in sustaining long involved technical forays, such as are demanded by the Widor-Phillip Toccata.

This cleverly organ-like arrangement of an original organ composition, easily topped an evening of consistent virtuosity.

Mr. Simmons' own compositions, of which several were played, revealed a more witty and romantic humor than was sometimes apparent in the interpretations of other works.

LACKED SOMETHING

The fourteen Liebeslieder Waltzes of Brahms, for instance, while brilliant, dynamic and handsomely phrased, lacked something in cantabile and mood definition, for each of these, after all, was also a song, as originally composed.

Because of the duo's remarkable ability to sustain tone and build massive textures, the Bach Brandenburg air and variations set was musically speaking, the evening's highlight.

The two California-based musicians will be in Victoria for a week conducting refresher courses for piano teachers and choral conductors. On Wednesday Mr. Scharl will give an organ recital at Christ Church Cathedral.

GEORGE I. WARREN

'Mr. Victoria' Dies Suddenly

The man who for 40 years made Victoria a byword of tourism died suddenly at his home late Tuesday afternoon, aged 77.

He was George I. Warren, the man known as Mr. Victoria, who helped found and served as head of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau from 1921 to 1961.

Mr. Warren had been in failing health in recent years and was latterly a hospital patient, but appeared to have been convalescing satisfactorily at home.

"He seemed very well," remarked a long-time friend, Fred Mulliner, who with another old acquaintance, Henry Jarvis, visited him Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Mulliner said he was very surprised to learn that Mr. Warren died between 5 and 6 p.m.

"He said, 'Tell the boys at the coffee club that I'll be around to see them.' He was referring to a group who take coffee together at Eaton's department store dining room every morning."

"It was a great shock when we heard an hour or so later that he was gone," Mr. Mulliner said.

In his lifetime as a tourist promoter for the capital city and Vancouver Island he insisted the tourist industry was Victoria's biggest business.

FOLLOW BIRDS

The slogan "Follow the Birds to Victoria" became known across the continent and beyond. Although it was not his idea (see Roundabout, page 2) he "pushed" it with J. Carl Pendray, who as a Chamber of Commerce director persuaded George to give up his own successful accident, sickness and insurance business to become secretary of the chamber and commissioner of public relations.

He remained as managing secretary until 1954, continuing as commissioner until 1961. At that time a testimonial dinner was held, attended by Lieutenant Governor Frank M. Ross.

Mr. Warren was given cash and passage to London for himself and his wife, who at last became tourists themselves.

The Warrens had travelled extensively, but always with Mr. Victoria doing his promotional best for the city.

SOLD VICTORIA

He said at the dinner when tribute was paid to his long loyalty:

"I've tried every one of those years to sell Victoria as the most beautiful city in Canada ... to keep its English atmosphere."

Later he told a press conference that a recruiting campaign will start soon for about 60 skilled community development officers who will work through Indian sides.

It was too soon to say whether Canada could supply these specially skilled people. Special courses were being set up by the Indian affairs branch to train personnel.

as a mailman, Lorin F. Shipper dutifully delivered all the mail to the people on his eastern Long Island route. But he slacked off before his 1956 retirement; apparently squirming away tons of letters in the latter days of his career because he had trouble getting around in his vintage automobiles.

Authorities disclosed Tuesday that more than two tons of mail was found in Shipper's garage along with his ancient La Salle and Packard. Today, postal inspectors set about dismantling his former home in this small village on the chance that even some undelivered mail may be stashed away.

Postmaster Roy G. Peterson of neighboring Southampton said about 10 per cent of the letters uncovered so far were first class. They will be delivered with the government's apologies—or at least an explanation stamped on them.

The junk mail, including a horde of toothpaste samples, will be thrown away.

Some of the mail dated back to 1948 but most was from the years 1953, 1954 and 1955, just prior to Shipper's retirement.

Citizens are asked to buy tickets—at their own price—from the gallery during store hours this week, the proceeds going to Oxfam in a ceremony set for July 18.

At the same time, all profits derived by the gallery during the week July 13-18 will be donated by Kaelst Kraft owner Brent Lauridsen.

Tickets are available only from the Kaelst gallery.

Aging Postman Tucked Mail Away

WATER MILL, N.Y. (UPI)—U.S. postal authorities looked for more undelivered mail today at the home of a retired elderly postman who apparently squirrelled away tons of letters in the latter days of his career because he had trouble getting around in his vintage automobiles.

WEDDING PLANS have been disclosed by Budd Schulberg, novelist and screenplay writer, and Geraldine Brooks, Broadway and TV actress. Schulberg, author of What Makes Sammy Run? and The Disenchanted, won an Oscar for his screenplay of On the Waterfront. They will be married in Hollywood Sunday afternoon. (AP Wirephoto.)

FRENCH SPY JAILED FOR LIFE

PARIS (UPI)—Former NATO deputy press chief Georges Paques was sentenced to life imprisonment for giving military secrets to the Soviet Union.

The French state security court imposed the life sentence despite the state prosecution's demands this afternoon that the 50-year-old dapper former civil servant should be put to death.

Paques had admitted selling North Atlantic Treaty Organization secrets to Moscow for 19 years.

Paques freely admitted in court he gave the Russians political information he gained as a senior French civil servant and then military secrets from NATO.

Sewer Project Rejected Again

The Metropolitan Board of Health again Tuesday opposed the installation of a sewage treatment plant in the Thetis Lake area.

J. L. Phelps, president of Phelps Development Co. Ltd., made a second attempt to win approval for the treatment system in a proposed 900-lot subdivision north of the Trans-Canada Highway near Mill Stream.

INTO MILL STREAM

The treated sewage would drain into Mill Stream which flows south from the subdivision towards Parson's Bridge and Esquimalt Harbor.

Mr. Phelps asked the board to reconsider on the grounds such a system would provide

Killer's Soul Goes to God Without Plea

NEW YORK (AP)—The judge omitted the usual phrase, "and may God have mercy on your soul," when he imposed the death-chair penalty on Winston Moseley Monday for the sex murder of a barmaid.

State Supreme Court Justice I. Irwin Shapiro declined to comment on the omission after he had sentenced Moseley, 29-year-old Negro and habitual sex offender and robber.

June 15, women in the courtroom cheered and applauded when a jury decreed the death penalty rather than life imprisonment for Moseley for the knife murder of Catherine (Kitty) Genovese, 28, in Kew Gardens, Queens, March 13.

When the jury reported its decision on the penalty, Shapiro said he did not believe in the death penalty, but figured he might have the wrong idea "when I see this monster." The justice added: "I wouldn't hesitate to pull the switch on him myself."

NEW CANADIAN ambassador of Colombia and Ecuador is Vancouver-born Ormond W. Dier, 45, now serving with external affairs department in Ottawa.

Vancouver Columnist Weir Dies

VANCOUVER (CP)—Harold Weir, 68, former editor and columnist whose journalistic career spanned 44 years, died Monday night.

Mr. Weir was editor of the Vancouver Sun in the 1920s and 1930s and was a columnist on that newspaper between 1952 and 1962.

He had also worked on the Winnipeg Tribune, Canadian Liberty and the now defunct Edmonton Bulletin.

WON OBE

During the Second World War he was awarded the Order of the British Empire for his work on the war services council for Alberta.

Mr. Weir suffered a heart attack in 1953 after covering the coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

The weak heart gradually restricted his activities until he was forced to retire in 1962. He wrote a weekly column for the Sun until he was forced to give up last year.

LIKED ANGER

It was said of Mr. Weir that the angrier readers got at his columns the better he liked it. He was convinced that the way to provoke people into thinking for themselves was to get them angry.

Born in Brantford, Ont., he graduated from the University of Saskatchewan. He came to Vancouver to join the old Vancouver World in 1919 and the following year joined the Sun where he said he was the entire editorial staff at one stage.

Mr. Weir is survived by his wife, Marian, and a daughter, Mrs. Glen Wylie of Islington, Ont.

Victoria Archers Triumph

Ian Thain and Bess Copeman, both of Victoria, captured grand aggregate honors in the Vancouver Island outdoor archery championships in Nanaimo.

Thain took the target round, the field round and second in the hunter division to collect 1,167 points for the champion-ship.

Bess took second place in ladies' freestyle target round, first in the field event and seconds in the hunter and clout events for 933 points.

Victoria junior Fred Pringle won the junior target, field and clout competitions.

Susan Johnson of Victoria won the intermediate target, field, hunter and clout divi-sions.

Tugmen Tripped Again

Victoria Jokers, led by Fred Doig and Jim Cunningham, added two more points to their Senior "B" Lacrosse League total at Memorial Arena Tuesday, at the expense of the hapless Foul Bay Tugmen.

Doig scored four goals, and Cunningham three, as Jokers dumped the winless Foul Bay team 16-6, to stay within striking distance of league-leading Nanaimo.

Al Tarbet and Whitley Wakelyn picked up two goals each for Victoria, with singles scored by Sonny Vickery, Pat Mulcahy, Bob Anderson, Dave Gale and Al Taylor.

Stu Walker turned in two goals, Tom Black, Ed Steele, Doug Bambrough and Al McLean one each for Tugmen.

RECORD for putouts by out-fielder was matched by San Francisco's Willie Mays in Tuesday's all-star baseball game. His seven putouts matched mark set in 1943 by Chet Laabs of St. Louis Browns. Mays broke another mark with sixth stolen base in mid-season classic.

'THERE IT GOES...'

Philadelphia's Johnny Callison watches ball sail toward right field stands at New York's Shea Stadium, to put an end to proceedings in 35th All-Star game. Three-run home run in bottom of ninth gave National League a 7-4 victory. New York catcher Elston Howard and umpire Ed Sudol also follow progress of ball in dramatic shot from right field. (AP Wirephoto)

Callison-Without-the-Vote Didn't Miss All-Star Boat

NEW YORK (AP)—It took the National League 31 years to draw even with the American in All-Star warfare Tuesday and in the end it was an ex-American League who did it.

Wondrous Willie Mays, as usual, starred in the field and on the bases. Billy Williams and Ken Boyer smashed home runs. Jim Bunning and Juan Marichal pitched superbly. But the hero of the National's 7-4 triumph was Johnny Callison, who was not even voted to the team.

Callison, a personal pick by manager Walter Alston, came up in the bottom of the ninth inning with two out, two on and the score tied at 4-4. He walked Dick Radatz's first pitch into the second deck over the right-field bullpen to square the all-star series at 17 victories apiece. The National had won 13, lost 5 and tied one of the last 9.

The 25-year-old Philadelphia Phillies outfielder, selected by Alston as the 25th man because of the National League's need for left-handed pinch-hitting strength, had entered the game in the fifth inning, batting for Bunning.

"He beat us enough," said Alston, managing his sixth winning All-Star squad in nine attempts. "I figured he owed us something."

In a recent series at Los Angeles, Callison hit two home runs in two games against Alston's Dodgers.

And to Think I Wished Him Luck'

Next to Radatz, the most charmed man on the American League squad was manager Al Lopez, who has yet to be on the winning All-Star squad. He lost four times as a manager, twice as a player and three times as a coach.

"And to think that before the game I shook hands with Johnny, and wished him luck," said Lopez.

It was Lopez, who traded Callison, then a 20-year-old Chicago White Sox hopeful, to the Phillies in the winter of 1959 for third-base-man Gene Freese.

Callison, Boston's brilliant relief pitcher, was invincible in the seventh and eighth innings when he struck out four of the six batters he faced.

Radatz, Boston's brilliant relief pitcher, was invincible in the seventh and eighth innings when he struck out four of the six batters he faced.

Willie promptly stole second. Orlando Cepeda singled to short right. Mays, holding up because he feared the ball might be caught, could go only as far as third.

Joe Pepitone, after retrieving the ball, fired to the plate. The ball skidded past the catcher to the screen and Willie slid across with the tying run. Cepeda took second.

Radatz disposed of Boyer on a pop-up, walked John Edwards intentionally and fanned pinch-hitter Henry Aaron. Then came the fateful pitch to Callison.

Until the final pitch Radatz, Brooks Robinson of Baltimore Orioles and Rocky Colavito of Kansas City Athletics had been

RESIGNATION REPORTS SPIKED BY HUTCHINSON

NEW YORK (AP)—"I'll quit only if they fire me or if the man upstairs tells me," Cincinnati's manager Fred Hutchinson said Tuesday. "And my health is all right."

The tall, stoop-shouldered pilot, battling cancer, used this statement to spike a rumor originating in Cincinnati that he would use the all-star baseball game as a stage for announcing his resignation.

Hutchinson, a one-time Detroit pitcher and manager, learned last winter that he had a malignancy in the lung.

During spring training, he rode around the field in a golf cart, and some of his duties were taken over by coaches.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

BEVERLY HILLS—Gary Morton and I have been comparing them."

"Is that so?" spoke up my B.W. "Do you mean that if I wait on my husband hand and foot, I am weakening him? And that I should make him do for himself, because that will strengthen him?"

Lucille flashed her a knowing smile.

Gary is a Sagittarius and I am a Taurus but I suspect we are also idiots for letting this conversation get away from us. We are both going to be strengthened to death by those sweet girls... who aren't stubborn but merely determined.

THE MIDNIGHT EARL IN N.Y.

Carroll Baker posed in a topless bathing suit during a "Carpetbaggers" publicity tour, but doesn't like the garment: "I'd rather be fully clothed—or not at all," the Buddy Hacketts leave July 10 for a vacation in Spain. "We'll stay away," he says jokingly, "till we can't stand each other any more."

Jack Carter tore a leg muscle, is limping through his "Little Me" touring show.

"Don't you find the Leos rather stubborn people?" I asked Gary.

"Stubborn!" echoed Lucille. "Stubborn! We're not stubborn. We're merely determined—but we're very pleasant about it."

WE'RE PLEASANT

"You're so right, Lucille," my B.W. said. "We're determined—but we're very pleasant about it."

I gazed up at the sky, fully expecting her to be struck by lightning for uttering such a fib. Gary had a sudden fit of coughing, I noticed.

"We never, never think of ourselves. That's typical of us Leos," Lucille said.

"How 'tude," nodded the B.W. "We're always sacrificing ourselves to help our loved ones be happy!"

"Exactly! How observant you are," Lucille said to the B.W. "We are determined to make others happy. Leos are never trying to make themselves happy. They're unselfish."

"To a fault," the B.W. said. "They are determined to take care of people," Lucille said. "Leos think that some people need to be taken care of, and Leos take care of them."

"It takes years," Lucille continued, "for Leos to learn that

Bullfighter 'Bugged' By Space Doctors

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A charging bull, a brave matador, cheering Mexico City aficionados — hardly the place for a space medicine experiment.

But pinned to the matador's skin were sensors, sending telemetry signals to recording machines inside the bull ring.

Each time the bull lunged the sensors recorded the matador's heart beat, respiratory rate and body temperature.

Spacecraft centre doctors used this information to determine how much physical stress the human body can stand, and what effect stress has on performance.

Past studies have shown race car drivers, hockey players, sky divers, bowlers, milers, polo players and skiers undergo more physical stress than astronauts in space flight.

None of the orbiting astronauts had heart rates higher than 184 beats a minute, while race car drivers reached 200.

The heart's normal rate is between 50 and 60 beats a minute, but healthy persons have experienced 180 beats a minute sitting in a dentist's chair.

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the best answers will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Rick Scoggins, age 12, of Scottsburg, Ore., for his question:

What was North America like in the Mesozoic Era?

The age-old story of the earth dates back more than four billion years, and the old story of life dates back some two billion years. Geologists divide the unfolding record of life into five eras, like the chapters in a story book. The fourth chapter was the Mesozoic Era.

If we could go back to the start of the Mesozoic Era, we might think we had landed on another planet. Certainly we would not recognize our North America. But the great era spanned 125 million years, and during that time our land was reshaped many times. The population of plants and animals also changed. As it ended some 60 million years ago, North America was very much like the land we know today.

When the Mesozoic Era opened, North and South America were separated by an shape.

Lucille flashed her a knowing smile.

DINOSAURS LIVED IN ERA

The climate through the era changed slowly from arid to semiarid and finally to a long spell of warmth and moisture. The early plants were scrubby bushes, cycads and conifers. Ginkgos flourished in the Northwest and huge monkey-puzzle trees in the Southwest.

The most stupendous changes in the map of North America were made during the last 60 million years of the Mesozoic Era.

The western Rockies arose, and to the south the Panama Ridge lifted from the sea and linked hands with the two Americas. Meantime, the Arctic Ocean reached down and joined its waters with the Gulf of Mexico, and for a while the central half of North America was submerged. When the Mesozoic Era ended, the map of North America had been remodeled into its present arm of the sea. Volcanoes seethed among the eastern Appalachians, and there were no mountains in the west. The western picture changed as the Sierra Nevada arose, taking millions of years to reach their full height. Later, the California region was cut off from North America by an invading arm of the sea.

CYPRUS DISPUTE

Canada Balks At Plane Deal

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The United States has delivered to Greece and Turkey Canadian-made F-104 jet fighter-bombers during the Cyprus crisis, informed sources here say.

Canada, though sharing in the cost of this program, has refused to make F-104 deliveries to the two NATO antagonists involved in the Cyprus issue.

Moreover, the RCAF said Tuesday its logistics liaison office in Athens was closed June 25 after 10 years of assisting the Greek air force in maintenance of Canadian-made Sabre jet fighters.

This means the RCAF won't participate in maintenance of Royal Hellenic Air Force F-104s produced in Canada.

The Canadian government has informed Greece and Turkey that if it does deliver F-104s to them, they can be used only "to strengthen the capacity of NATO to deter or resist aggression."

Canada has refused since 1960 to ship any arms to Portugal, a NATO ally, lest they be used by the Portuguese to put down rebellion in their African colony of Angola.

In 1961, Canada and the U.S. agreed to produce 140 F-104s at Canadair Limited, Montreal, for their NATO mutual aid programs for NATO partners in Europe. The U.S. put up $150,000,000 for this program, Canada $50,000,000.

The program became somewhat of an embarrassment to Canada when the Cyprus crisis arose and 1,100 Canadian troops were sent to the island as part of a United Nations force.

As a result, it was agreed that all the early deliveries of F-104s should belong solely to the U.S. mutual aid program and the later deliveries to a joint Canada-U.S. program. Production is scheduled to continue until October, 1965.

Informants said Tuesday no decision has been taken by Canada and the U.S. on which NATO countries will receive the F-104s under the joint program.

The implication was that neither Greece nor Turkey will get them until the Cyprus situation has been settled.

External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons Tuesday he called in Greek Ambassador John D. Kalergis Monday and told him that Greek "involvements" in Cyprus are making the UN force's job more difficult.

Mr. Martin said Greek-Cypriot police prevented the UN from observing landings of Greek troops in Cyprus. He had said Friday that Greek troops and arms were being landed on the island, creating a dangerous situation for the UN force.

Press reports have listed the number of trucks carrying Greek soldiers from the southern port of Limassol into the Troodos Mountains of central Cyprus. The Greeks were said to have debarked from the Greek liner Hermes.

T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, said the Cyprus government "is playing the UN for a sucker."

City Fireman To Seek Saanich Seat

Edward Charles Ball, 896 Fairview Crescent, Tuesday became the third announced candidate for the Saanich council seat if a by-election is held this fall.

The 48-year-old Victoria fireman is immediate past president of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association's provincial command.

A by-election for reeve and at least one councillor is expected as a result of Reeve Stanley Murphy's intention to resign so he can take up a teaching post in Southern Rhodesia.

Coun. Hugh Curtis said he will vacate his seat to run for the reeve position and there is speculation Coun. Joseph Casey may do the same.

FINE FIRST IN ONTARIO

Hospital Death Costs MD $100

TORONTO (CP) — Five charges against one doctor for any sign of notification.

WON'T COMMENT YET

Special Crown prosecutor John Holtzman said he would not comment on a possible appeal in Dr. Plewes' case until all trials in the case are over.

The trials of all involved are being held separately and things began warming up when Dr. Kenneth A. Brown went on trial after Dr. Noble's conviction.

Miss Morgan died in hospital a few weeks after a surgical clamp was left in her body during an abdominal operation.

Dr. Alan Noble became the first doctor in Ontario ever to be convicted of the charge and was fined $100 and costs, with an alternative of 15 days in jail. Neither the doctor, nor his defense counsel, D. K. Laidlaw, would say whether an appeal against Magistrate James Butler's decision would be lodged. Five other charges against him were dropped and he was given a month-to-pay his fine.

Earlier in the day, five remaining charges against Dr. Burns Plewes, the hospital's chief surgeon, were dropped after his lawyer, D. K. Laidlaw, successfully argued that the charges so closely resembled a charge on which Dr. Plewes was acquitted Monday that he would be placed in double jeopardy.

Dr. Plewes was acquitted Monday on a charge of failing to notify the coroner of a death on the technicality that the coroner had failed to introduce evidence that files of the coroner had been searched.

"That's not true," said Dr. A. J. Kennedy, senior intern in pathology at the hospital, who prepared the report for the signature of chief pathologist Dr. S. F. Penny.

Dr. Kennedy testified a handwritten report, mentioning the clamp, was made on the day of the autopsy and had been available. The final report was written in December after completion of laboratory tests.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1964—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

One of this corner's junior scouts decided the other day that his brush cut was a millimetre too long at the sides, and in a spirit of youthful adventure, set out to hunt up a new barber.

After considerable window-shopping, he found an operator to his taste, a comb-and-scissors expert who combined dash and assurance with an artist's finesse.

Our fellow checked in, and presently mounted the chair. Until the ultimate last moment, all went very well. Then with a flourish, the barber reached a bottle from his counter and anointed the finished trim, which began to foam.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the barber, "but I'm afraid we got the wrong bottle, heh-heh-heh. This one seems to be shampoo."

Since he couldn't send our lad-about-town frothing into the street, he then proceeded to make amends with shampoo, rinse, hair-drying and scalp-pummel a record for the price of $4.50, on the house.

He also entertained with tales of other torsional contremps, one of which involved a new chum from Europe and his first Canadian customer.

This barber, an artist who had coiffed any number of distinguished Continental heads, administered a standard European brush cut.

His patron inspected the finished job. "Too long on top," was his verdict. "I want a brush cut."

The maestro, considerably flustered, set to again. But his timing was shot, and as he worked his way up the back, his scissors skidded under the comb and snipped to the skin.

For an instant he stared in horror. Then the years of hovering over Old World diplomats came to his rescue. Daintily, he neutered up around the disaster area.

"Sir," he observed as he reached for a bottle—the right one—"are you aware that here at the back is a small bare spot?"

"Must have sneaked up on me," his customer said. He groped and frowned. "What should I do about it?"

"We will watch it," said the barber, "but I see no cause for worry." He administered a last judicious rub. "There are signs that the hair has begun to sprout again."

After first-nighting a succession of high-budget but mediocre films that culminated in an expensive floperoo titled Cleopatra, Win and I decided that nothing less than an earth-shaker would coax us farther afield than the Oak Bay with its sturdy comedies.

In consequence, we remained stubbornly cool while friends told us we really ought to shake loose and go see Tom Jones at the Capitol.

This we refused to do until a sedate couple old enough to know better dissolved into semi-coherent sputtering while briefing us on the picture.

So we went, grumbling; and now, between spatters of our own, urge anyone of a right and proper age to catch Tom Jones while it and he are still in town.

Luckily the English, who have a gift for hearty, earthy humor, bagged Henry Fielding's novel of eighteenth century England before Hollywood got around to it. The resulting picture is a cross-country gallop that tramples the proprieties along with the chickens through one outrageously entertaining scene after another.

Tom Jones is gigantic, stolid, super-colossal, and if I could plug it with an even more florid superlative, I'd gladly do so.

But no plug today for Victoria City, which having built an attractive and functional parking palace on View Street, is dammably slow in catching up with an early Edison invention that gives off a reassuring brilliance when a switch is flipped.

The 11:30 blackness at either end of the lower parking level is enough to scare the pants off Dracula, let alone citizens groping carward with their wives after a late show.

Lights, gentlemen, lights! We have too many of these mercury holes in our downtown area.

Centre Assured Despite Plodding

By JOHN MIKA

City Hall officials now feel that the senior citizens' recreational centre will be built after all—with little thanks to the beneficiaries themselves.

Indications today are that the painfully slow campaign by various groups representing the retired class will come close to its $60,000 target.

The campaign to raise the user's relatively minor share of a $200,000 project began early this year but dragged so much that some civic officials privately expressed fears the building would have to be abandoned.

Most of the cost for the multi-purpose development—to provide services ranging from hobby craft rooms and equipment to reading rooms—will be paid for by the city and provincial government.

The Flisard-Government Street corner of Centennial Victoria Square was reserved for the building and most senior citizen groups were forecast they would easily raise their share of the cost in short order.

It was pointed out that some 25,000 senior citizens in the Greater Victoria area would be able to use the building as their own facility and only a $2 donation from each would assure success.

BUT POOR BRUIN IS DEAD

Kill or Capture Argument Goes On

A black bear which roamed the Saanich Peninsula for three days after first being sighted at Beaver Lake was killed Tuesday, but a controversy surrounding it lives on.

Four shells fired by Nanaimo cougar hunter Jim Dewar cut down the 100-pound bear at 2 p.m. near a berry farm owned by G. P. Arnaud, 6432 Patricia Bay Highway south of Keating Cross Road.

The body was immediately buried in a sawdust pit on the farm.

While the bear's remaining time on earth grew shorter as the clock ticked through Tuesday morning, two warring factions began to emerge.

One was comprised of housewives of Saanich, demanding that the bear be shot.

The other was made up of conservationists, demanding the bear be spared.

Both bombarded the Game Department with their telephone calls.

REPRIEVE NOT GRANTED

As the hunter and his dogs were stalking the bear SPCA secretary man a n a g e r David Beeching tried to obtain a one-day reprieve for the bruin until a tranquilizer dart-gun could be shipped over from Vancouver.

He was told that the hunt would continue and that the tranquilizer would be used on its arrival if the bear had not been shot in the meantime.

But the bear was sighted well before the tranquilizer gun could be obtained, and the animal was shot.

The bear had molested no one during his three-day visit to civilization.

He had followed three berry-pickers down a road until being scared off, had eaten part of a strawberry patch and had torn up some nearby hallocks.

SAFETY FIRST

Provincial game department inspector Bob Sinclair said he regretted having to kill the animal, but that there was no alternative.

"You just don't know what a wild animal will do," he said. "Suppose a child had gotten in its way; then where would we be?"

It was argued by those supporting the shooting that even if the bear had been drugged and returned to its natural habitat, it would again wander down to civilized areas because of memories of easy food.

Appeals are going to several wealthy persons to pull the campaign through and there are indications that they will.

BIDS IN AUGUST

"We now hope and expect to be able to call for tenders in August so this building can be put up as a winter works project," a city official said.

If the hope is realized it will soothe some feelings that the city was led down a garden path by a barrage of demands from all sorts of senior citizen groups in recent years for a central recreation centre to supplement neighborhood centres.

Aldermen, particularly at election time, frequently were bombarded with criticisms and were told if only they provided leadership, a fund campaign would go over the top.

There is no expectation that will happen now but city officials have their fingers crossed that the campaign committee can at least get within shooting distance of its target so that there is some justification for proceeding with the centre this fall.

By the time police arrived the youths had left the scene. The thieves started to discard the clothing a short distance away.

Police followed a trail of clothing scattered along Quebec, Menzies, Kingston, Montreal, Dallas, Bianshard and Quadra Streets. The trail ended near View Street.

Two youths were seen by a nearby resident taking the suitcases from a car in the lot at Bel Isle Motel, 427 Belleville Street. They got into a car driven by a third person.

Two youths were seen by a nearby resident taking the suitcases from a car in the lot at Bel Isle Motel, 427 Belleville Street. They got into a car driven by a third person.

Police said the only articles missing from the cars are a camera and a roll of pennies.

Entry in each case but one was made by breaking vent windows. The top of a convertible was slashed.

Opposed to the shooting placed game branch official who said before word of the killing reached him, "I'm sick to death of the Victorian attitude that insists on killing every poor, harmless, wild creature that dares to show its nose on this peninsula."

"If the people who have been keeping our phones busy hollering for the bear's blood would just hold off, we could deal humanely with this situation."

"But the pressure for a shooting is simply too heavy."

Lawyers Battle Over Witnesses

Stormy Opening For Death Probe

Witnesses were excluded despite protests at the stormy start today of a special coroner's inquest into the death in March of a city nursing home patient.

Mrs. Jessie Charlton Little, 85, a patient for four months at Glengarry Private Hospital, 1780 Fairfield Road, died the day after she was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital with a broken arm.

The inquest, under coroner Edmond J. de St. Jorre, was called by the attorney-general's department on a Supreme Court order from Mr. Justice T. W. Brown.

The previous coroner, Dr. J. H. Moore, had conducted an informal inquiry shortly after the death and filed his report with the A-G's office.

Counsel for the private hospital, David Hummel, at the outset of the inquest applied to have some six to eight witnesses—mostly employees of the hospital—present when evidence was given by the 15 persons subpoenaed by police to attend.

Mr. Hummel made it clear he was not representing the employees at the inquest.

EXCLUDE ALL

Mr. St. Jorre said he intended to exclude all witnesses until each was called to give his own testimony.

Counsel for the deceased's family, George Gregory, said he proposed to call Mr. Hummel as a witness and he should therefore be excluded with the others.

After 40 minutes of disagreement, in which Mr. Hummel said he would also ask for Mr. Gregory to be subpoenaed, Mr. St. Jorre excluded witnesses and adjourned the hearing to 2 p.m. at a different location.

CRAMPED ROOM

The hearing opened in a 15 by 20-foot room in Victoria city police station.

Thirty-four persons including police and officials crammed in with a 10-foot table and 33 chairs, leaving other interested persons standing in the hallway.

Arrangements were made to resume at the RCMP court room in the Law Courts building.

Mr. Hummel said that any person deeming himself affected by the proceedings has the right to be present as witness to give evidence and be cross-examined. This is provided for in the Coroner's Act.

HIS RIGHT

Mr. St. Jorre said he has the right to exclude witnesses and any persons wishing to be present could be represented by counsel.

"If they are excluded," said Mr. Hummel referring to 13 persons who stood when requested by Mr. St. Jorre, "it would be in contravention of section 23 (of the Coroner's Act)."

"You can't have it both ways. Either you are representing them, or you are not," Mr. St. Jorre told him.

"I think Mr. Hummel should be treated as the other witnesses," Mr. Gregory put in.

"VIOLENT THING"

"Mr. Gregory well knows I have no personal knowledge of this death and if he seeks to remove me as counsel just to find out in the first few questions that I have no knowledge... it is highly improper and a vicious thing to do," Mr. Hummel said.

"That is regrettable, and you shouldn't speak of another member of the bar like that," the coroner said.

Mr. Hummel said he had investigated the matter on behalf of Glengarry Private Hospital Ltd. "for months and spent thousands of dollars of the corporation's money on it."

If counsel insisted on calling each other as witnesses, then Mr. St. Jorre would have to arrange for subpoenas and counsel would have to appoint other lawyers, the coroner said, granting the adjournment for counsel to consider the matter.

"I suggest Mr. Hummel is as wrong as he is rude," Mr. Gregory said. "What he said to people who are not his clients may certainly be of some assistance to the inquest."

And Now It's the Piggy-Back 'Totemotel'

"Daddy, I wanna go upstairs and sleep."

"That's fine dear. Turn off the water in the sink on your way up, will you please?"

Hardly the conversation one would expect to hear in a station wagon travelling down a freeway, but quite possible in the station wagon driven by Ken Greening of Van Neys, California.

Riding piggy-back on his late-model wagon is a "totemotel," a fibreglass unit which rests on the tailgate and opens into the wagon's interior.

Yet it weighs only 365 pounds.

It's streamlined too, making

Porcelain Brooches Depict Our West Coast Heritage

By PENNY SAVER

Much of our west coast heritage goes back to Indian mythology and perhaps one of the best-known sagas is that dealing with the thunderbird and the whale.

History has it that when the thunderbird was triumphant there were years of feast but when the whale was victorious there were years of famine.

Through this myth, the thunderbird has come down to us as a symbol of good luck and prosperity.

Today, thunderbirds are appearing in porcelain brooches made by a local man and selling at $1.50. Also available in porcelain are dogwood brooches, priced at $1.95; seagulls, $1.75, and sea serpents, $1.25.

Handcrafted leather goods are becoming "best sellers" in the jewelry market, too, and brooches I found today are no exception. They are made in Canada and include such designs as dogwood blossoms, maple leaves, Canada geese and seagulls.

Prices of these range from $1.95 to $4.95. Many have earrings to match.

Ideal tourist souvenirs are bone china cup and saucer sets. Ones selling in this same shop are designed with typical British Columbia scenes. Sets have been reduced to $1 and show scenes of many of the province's holiday spots.

Examples of the designs include a scene of White Rock with Mount Baker in the background; Rattlesnake Point on Kalamalka Lake at Vernon, and Heather Lake on top of Mount Revelstoke.

If you would like to know where Penny shopped for these Canadian souvenirs, please call her at 382-3131. She will gladly give you name and location of this shop.

Direction of Waistline Seams Determined by Construction

"Dear Eunice:

"When the bodice and skirt have been joined, I never know which direction the seams should be pressed and the pattern never explains it. I don't know what we'd do without you to come to the rescue. You give us that confidence and encouragement we all seem to need."

Mrs. C.C.

Thanks for your sweet words and I'd love to personally meet and teach each one of you.

The direction of the waistline seams are often determined by the construction. If the bodice is gathered, the seams must go down; if the skirt is gathered, the seams must go up. In other words, you don't change the direction of the gathered edge.

Attend Wedding

Among out-of-town guests who attended the Ralph-Smale wedding were Mr. and Mrs. T. Colley, Mr. R. Colley, all of Huxley, Alta.; Mr. and Mrs. R. Field, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hagg, Mr. and Mrs. G. Field, B. THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"I'd like some pig's feet with a little less mileage on them than these."

Roach-Berger Wedding

Garden City United Church was the setting when Rev. R. Whitmore heard vows exchanged between Sandra Louise Berger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Berger, 774 Burnside Road West, and Wayne Thomas Roach, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Roach of Lake Cowichan.

White and bronze chrysanthemums decorated the church. Pew markers were white carnations.

The bride wore a gown of crystal sheer that she had made. Flitted bodice was fashioned with boat neckline and three-quarter-length sleeves. Deep pleats curved to a low pointed back waistline from a front panel and extended into a train. A shoulder-length veil with deep border of lace misted from a clara of sequins and seed pearls. She carried yellow rosebuds and stephanotis.

Maid of honor, Miss Sylvia Roach, and bridesmaids, Miss Donna Berger, and Miss Pierine Notte, wore mint green crystal sheer waltz-length gowns. Their headpieces were a single flower with circlet of mint green tulle, and they carried fan-shaped bouquets of yellow and white carnations.

Thomas Crowthers was best man and James Roach and Bruce Roach ushered guests to their pews.

Yellow rosebuds topped the wedding cake which centred the table at a reception in the Soho Club. Willard Berger proposed the toast to his niece.

Leaving for a honeymoon trip to Banff, the bride wore a pink dressmaker suit with navy blue accessories and white carnation corsage.

All attendants carried white carnations.

Best man was Tom McKenzie and ushers were Gary Ralph, Henry Hohlachoff, Bill Booth and Mrs. D. Hall, cousin of the groom, wore short turquoise gowns of nylon sheer over taffeta, with single strands of pearls and earrings, gifts of the bride.

Intrigue Fashions

NEW YORK (AP) — James Bond, author Ian Fleming's symbol of sophistication, is likely to turn up wherever there's intrigue. He got into the act at the fall fashion showings by the New York Couture Group Tuesday way of a slick imitation leather jacket called Secret Agent 007.

The belted jacket, shown with black boots and gloves, was one of a series of the black-and-brown combinations suggested for casual wear.

Leather appeared frequently—often as piping on dresses and sometimes in the form of luggage strap closings on suit jackets.

Favorites for day dresses and suits were grey flannel and navy—often trimmed with bold brass buttons. But for formal evenings the color scheme came in combinations of black, white and bright pink with a satin sash of one shade often used to separate the other two.

CLINICAL CURES ON INCREASEDrugs, Radiation, Surgery Combine in Cancer Battle

Through surgery, radiation and drugs, cancer victims are being given new hope for added life. The following second of two articles outlines some of the drugs now in use to combat cancer and what may come from the laboratories in the not too distant future.

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP)—The drug that can cure cancer is probably already known.

It is one among about 1,000 known organic chemicals whose formulas have been worked out over the years. Chemistry cookbooks tell how to make them again.

But the situation is like having a million keys to a lock and, worse yet, no clear conception of what the lock looks like.

Laborious trial-and-error testing of thousands of chemicals against animal cancers has turned up a couple of dozen drugs which do or may act against human cancers. They kill or poison cancer cells, but unhappily not without some similar effects upon healthy cells, or they have other drawbacks.

Now scientists are on the trail of new methods toward finding the effective key or keys. The lock, they believe, involves a "wayward gene" directing cells to follow an abnormal destiny.

A curative drug might act in any of several ways.

'Take Out' Gene

It might block the wayward gene from action, like a football guard taking out a would-be tackler.

Or it might unscramble the scrambled message carried in the DNA of the responsible gene. Genes are composed of DNA or deoxyribonucleic acid formed into long strands or strings.

Or a curative drug might interfere with RNA, another nuchemical first formulated many years ago, with its capability still unknown.

A few drugs winning some benefits against cancers are known to act in this fashion. An antibiotic, actinomycin D, apparently combines with a specific part of the DNA thus interfering with transcription of the genetic message. Dr. Bendich explains. But it probably acts against all DNA, not just that of cancer cells.

And a newer class of drugs, the hydroxyl amines, invades cells to chop the DNA strands just at certain places.

Dr. Bendich thinks they hit at punctuation points, the periods and commas separating the genes or bits of DNA in the whole strand making up a chromosome. Changes in the shape of the chromosome, caused by these drugs, can be seen under the microscope.

The separate messages carried by each gene are not lost. But the sequence is rearranged. This can be fatal to a cell, or might give it its cancer quality. Feed-back controls that take part in sequential action of separate genes may be lost or upset.

Rarely Hopeless

If this is the mechanism then a drug is needed that would straighten out the tape recorder sequence of the cancer cell.

So goes, in the laboratory, part of the drama of human intellect against cancer.

It is waged also in the hospital and clinic, with growing optimism. Now through research and clinical knowledge, "cancer is becoming a manageable disease," says Chicago's Dr. Charles Huggins.

"Only in a few instances now should we say that cancer is a hopeless disease," says Dr. James T. Grace Jr. of Rosewall Park in Buffalo. "There is always practically something that can be done to add to comfort. We can add life to a person's time, not just time to his life."

Three Weapons

The weapons are three—surgery, radiation and drugs now in increasing number.

Dr. Sidney Farber of Children's Hospital in Boston, a famous pioneer in chemotherapy or drug treatment of cancer, declares: "I don't believe we have yet begun to see the great returns we are going to see from chemotherapy."

He has battled particularly against acute leukemia in children, witnessing, as others have, an extension of some months of healthy life, and perhaps a rare and occasional cure.

Drugs have produced apparent cures in choriocarcinoma, a rare disease of the uterus in women, and in Wilms' tumor of the kidneys in children.

Based on growing clinical experience, drugs are being used with increasing benefit in tandem, or simultaneously, taking aim on the wayward gene and its effects, sometimes with ingenious techniques of administration.

More Effective

They are combined with surgery and radiation aimed at removing or destroying the malignant growth and its spread to seed elsewhere in the body. Both surgery and radiation are being applied more effectively now.

"Radiotherapy has not yet been exploited to the full," Dr. Farber feels. "Radiologists are continually developing intelligent, aggressive and carefully controlled use of radiation."

And surgery is coming into play "more extensively and with refinements," says Dr. Grace. One boon has been improved supportive methods, such as in nutrition and control of infections. Operations inconceivable a decade ago now can save life, and frequently remove all the cancerous tissue.

Combinations of drugs, surgery and radiation are producing improved results in cancers of the brain, the bladder and other organs.

"Clinical reports show that cancer cures are increasing," reports Dr. Wendell G. Scott, president of the American Cancer Society. Cure means no sign of the disease five years after diagnosis and first treatment.

The organization has caused some concern to Democratic party officials who realize that any major shift of the traditionally Democratic Negro vote could be disastrous in tight elections. In the past, some Negro precincts have given Democratic candidates as much as 80 per cent of their vote.

A survey conducted for Union Carbide of Canada, maker of an insect repellent, showed that a combination of the right factors can make a person either attractive to the insects or of little interest.

The ideal target from the mosquito's point of view is someone who is dark, wears dark clothing, is energetic and healthy and uses a distinctive cologne or after-shave lotion.

Tests of 799 persons in 16 Canadian cities showed that while mosquitoes will swarm around a person of this sort, they will virtually ignore an individual who is light-skinned, calm and cool, bathes frequently and avoids any kind of scent.

U.S. SENATE PROBE BEGINSUndertakers Differ On Price Ads Value

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate investigation into the funeral business heard today both sides of the argument on advertising of prices.

Arguing the case against it were witnesses from the U.S. Funeral Directors Association. On the other side was Washington undertaker W. W. Chambers who believes in advertising and said he survives on volume trade.

Without advertising, Chambers said, there is a tendency to let the undertaker charge whatever the traffic would bear.

But Harry J. Gilligan, past president of the Funeral Directors Association, told the Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee that he saw no point in it.

After all, he argued, the primary purpose of advertising is to expand the market, and he added in his statement:

"There isn't anything anyone can do to create a new market

TORONTO (CP) — Some people are more attractive to mosquitoes than others.

Such things as complexion, color of clothing and health can determine whether you are likely to become a favorite landing ground for mosquitoes. So can the after-shave lotion you use.

U.S. AND RUSSIA AT GENEVARocket Reduction Talks Started

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and Russia agreed Tuesday to begin bilateral talks on how to reduce the number of nuclear rockets during world disarmament.

The talks will be conducted between the two co-chairmen of the 17-nation disarmament conference, Ambassador Clare H.

Timberlake of the United States and Semyon K. Tarapkin. The latter returned to Geneva last weekend to take over from the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin.

Timberlake replaces William C. Foster, director of the U.S. arms control and disarmament agency, who left for Washington today.

The co-chairmen will try to CONFLICT OF INTEREST?

Senate Dawdling
On Bank Queried

By VICTOR J. MACKIE

OTTAWA—The question of a conflict-of-interest issue arising over the Senate's handling of private bills to incorporate a number of new banks and mortgage companies was raised in the House of Commons today.

The matter came up indirectly as the Commons cannot discuss the business of the upper chamber or the "other place" as it is referred to in the lower House.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon emphatically denied having any knowledge of any member of the federal cabinet suggesting to Liberal senators that they get on with the business of chartering certain banks, which had applications before the "other place," before a suspicion mounted in the public mind that those charters were being delayed because of a conflict of interest.

Mr. Gordon said he had made no such suggestions and he knew of no other member of the cabinet making any such suggestions.

NEWSPAPER REPORT

The question was raised by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre). He based it on a report in a Toronto newspaper that the possibility of a conflict of interest was being quietly discussed in financial and political circles.

The report said in part: "A question arises whether some members of the Senate, many of whom are associated with the oldest, most powerful financial institutions in the country, may be using their position to discourage or retard the development of young and lusty rivals to challenge this establishment."

It continued:

"At least one senior member of the Pearson cabinet has suggested to Liberal senators that they get on with the business of chartering the Bank of Western Canada before the suspicion grows in the public mind that the charter is being held up because of senators' interest, direct and indirect, in the banks now chartered."

Rule 53 of the senate stipulates: "No senator is entitled to vote upon any question in which he has any pecuniary interest whatsoever, nor held in common with the rest of the Canadian subjects of the crown; and the vote of any such senator so interested will be disallowed."

Mr. Knowles asked the finance minister if he had received any protest from business, banking or other interests with regard to the alleged conflict-of-interest?

Mr. Gordon replied in the negative.

FOSTER MOTHER WANTED COMPANY

She Spared Rod, Didn't Spoil 37

By MARGE GILROY

Mrs. James Phillips spared the rod but failed to spoil the 37 foster children under her care during the past six years.

When the Phillips retired to Victoria after 30 years of prairie farming, the robust Irish mother of eight children found she was lonesome with nobody to talk with and nothing to do.

At first Mrs. Phillips took in college students for boarders, but they didn't provide the company she wanted.

"They studied all the time. Even when I called them for a cup of coffee, they rushed back to their books taking their coffee," she said.

After telling her daughter she was going to move back to the prairies, the daughter suggested she take care of foster children.

"I told her I didn't know anything about that," said Mrs. Phillips.

Mrs. Phillips believed in paddling her own children when they needed it, but she feels differently about her foster family. Still the rules of the house are made to stick.

LIVING COSTS
JUMPED AGAIN
LAST MONTH

OTTAWA (CP)—After holding steady for two months, Canada's cost-of-living spurted ahead in June to another re-triggered the jump.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the consumer price index rose to 135.3 in June from 135 in May. It had been at the 135 level since April. In June of last year it was 132.8.

Food, housing and clothing costs were higher in June, more than offsetting lower prices for transportation and recreation. Price trends were unchanged for health and personal care, and tobacco and alcohol.

PGE STUDIES
PULP MILL
SPUR LINE

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—J. S. Broadbent, general manager of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, said Tuesday the railway is studying the economic possibilities of a spur line to a proposed pulp and paper complex 125 miles north of here.

The railway executive said a possible route for the line was also being studied.

It would be about 19 miles long, running from Kennedy to the site of the pulp complex planned by Alexandra Forest Products and Cattermole Timber Limited.

PGE's only other spur line is now being constructed from Summit Lake to Fort St. James, a distance of 78 miles.

Board Backs
New Classes
For Deaf Tots

A recommendation to provide classes for partially deaf children between the ages of two and five, and in the early elementary grades, was approved Tuesday by the Metropolitan Board of Health.

The recommendation was presented to the board by the Joint planning committee of the Health Centre for Children. The committee has made a study of the incidence of deafness and the needs of the children affected.

It was reported that there are 25 to 50 children and between 10 to 20 pre-schoolers, between two and five, in school district No. 61 requiring special training and education.

EARLY START

Because speech habits are fixed by the time the child is six it was recommended that training begin early, following a diagnosis and assessment of the child's hearing ability.

Cost of providing a special teacher, equipment and transportation for such a class this year is estimated at $12,000.

ISRAEL ASKS UN AID IN SYRIA INCIDENTS

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Israel has instructed its representative at the United Nations to request Secretary-General Thant's intervention in the "grave situation" along this country's border with Syria, government officials said today.

They said Ambassador Michael Comay planned to ask Thant to call on Syria to halt a series of border incidents in which six Israelis have been wounded by gunfire since last Thursday. The shooting came from Syrian border positions, it was charged.

U.S., Ready to Study Reds' UN 'Army' Plan

VIET NAM TALKS URGED

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Russia and the United States appear to be moving into a major new negotiation, makeup, organization and ions military forces used to keep the peace.

Russia and the U.S. differ on the extent of control that should be vested in the Security Council, where the veto exists, rather than the General Assembly, where there is no veto, and on some other issues.

But U.S. state department authorities said today in Washington they are encouraged by Russia's latest move and believe that the Soviet government may be ready to begin serious negotiations on these questions and to co-operate with the United Nations to a degree unknown in the past.

The United States and Britain were not given official Soviet outlines of the proposal until Tuesday night at the Soviet Union delegation's New York headquarters.

Stevenson later told reporters that at first glanced he was not given official Soviet outlines of the proposal until Tuesday night at the Soviet Union delegation's New York headquarters.

The U.S. state department is trying to assess Russia's latest intentions in the light of its split with Communist China and the fact that it is facing a loss of its vote in the UN because of the affairs of Laos may kindle

SOLD U.S. PROCESS TO ITALIAN FIRM

Wonder-Drug Piracy Role Admitted

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Sidney Martin Fox, alleged "mastermind" in a multi-million-dollar drug piracy case, today admitted he had stolen secret antibiotic cultures and process information from the American Cyanamid Company and sold them to an Italian drug firm.

Fox's confession came in an affidavit filed in New York state supreme court in support of Cyanamid's $500,000 suit against Maurice Rosenblatt, a consultant for the Italian company, Lepetit S.P.A. of Milan.

Fox stated Lepetit knowingly paid $105,000 for the stolen drugs and information. He admitted he received $55,000 and Rosenblatt $15,000. Rosenblatt acted as an intermediary in the sale.

Fox also stated he hoped to realize upwards of $300,000 from the Italian firm for the stolen properties which he obtained during his employment by Cyanamid's Lederle laboratories at Pearl River, N.Y., and later through other Lederle employees after he left the company in 1959. Lederle spent some $10,000,000 to develop the "wonder drugs" involved in the thefts.

Fox's confession was the latest development in the years-long case of industrial espionage and patent piracy that has been handled by federal and state courts in several suits. Rosenblatt is the sole defendant in the New York State supreme court case.

A resident of Italy, he has been served a subpoena but rejected jurisdiction of the New York court on grounds that actions described in the suit occurred abroad. Fox's statement today claims they also occurred in New York.

The sales of Lederle's se-rets were facilitated by the fact that some foreign countries do not have effective patent protection laws.

At least the new members of the Commonwealth avoid one problem: Mike's an expert on—they march into independence with their own flags already flyin'.

Bennett Seeks Go-Ahead On Huge Fraser R. Plan

Rhodesia Issue High On Agenda

LONDON (CP)—The Southern Rhodesian question got high priority on the agenda of the Commonwealth prime ministers conference which opened here today.

Delegation sources said the Southern Rhodesian problem—the key issue for most of the seven African countries at the conference, was given second place only to a discussion of international affairs.

Formal discussions among the Commonwealth leaders, which was being held behind closed doors, began this afternoon.

Ghanian President Kwame Nkrumah issued a statement earlier this week saying Britain had an inescapable responsibility to ensure that a majority government was established in Southern Rhodesia.

Britain has in effect refused to grant Southern Rhodesia independence while the white minority government of the self-governing colony refuses to grant voting rights to the African population.

British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, with Canada, Australia and New Zealand wanted a complete reappraisal of what the modern Commonwealth means based on his ideas for closer economic ties and expanded technical aid.

During the morning meeting the leaders of the Commonwealth approved the admission of Malawi, raising the membership of the Commonwealth to 18.

WELCOMES LEADERS

Douglas-Home welcomed the leaders at Marlborough House, the first conference since September, 1962.

The dangers of British Guiana were expected to be emphasized by Trinidad's Dr. Eric Williams after new violence killed 24 persons in the sugar colony torn by racial strife.

But prime ministers and presidents intended to be concerned chiefly with problems in their own particular region. Malaysia's struggle against Indonesia caused mounting concern among Far Eastern and Asian members.

And President Ayub Khan of Pakistan indicated in a pre-conference speech that "Western economic imperialism" might

'Big War Possible' Khrushchev Warns

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev warned today that centres of international tension such as those in Southeast Asia can grow into a big conflict and even touch off a world conflagration.

The Soviet leader, speaking to military academy graduates, said dangerous situations existed in the Caribbean area over Cuba, in Germany, and in Laos and South Viet Nam in Asia. He said "the interference of aggressive imperialist powers in underdeveloped countries by failure to support them adequately.

Labor relations board hearings on the company's charges that four unions have illegally restricted production by refusing to cross office worker picket lines were adjourned until 10 a.m. Thursday in the hope that all will be settled by then.

Mr. Sands and Mr. Lowe met most of this morning in an attempt to clear the snag.

"We are on the verge," said a company spokesman.

Mr. Clyne, after sending a telegram to the premier—accepting his settlement proposals, said there should be an immediate withdrawal of pickets and everyone should return to work.

He said the premier's proposals were "in accord with the company's position throughout."

EMPLOYEES FREE

This was that freedom of employees to decide themselves if they would join the union should be maintained.

The union wanted a closed shop.

Mr. Bennett's plan was that a majority of employees must be union members, that no present union members would lose their jobs, and that all employees would pay union dues. The matter of wages would be settled by a government arbiter.

Meanwhile, despite today's snag, there was rejoicing in the Alberni Valley that the end is in sight.

There was free beer Tuesday night in Alberni beer parlors.

WING DING

Mayor Fred Bishop said there would be a wing ding of a party if anyone has any money left.

The company's charges before the labor relations board are that the International Woodworkers of America, the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Electrical Workers and United Paper Makers unions were illegally restricting production in the valley.

WORK FRIDAY?

Alberni On Verge Of Accord

By FRANK RUTTER

The Alberni Valley strike today teetered on the verge of a settlement that would put the lumber industry into full production again on Friday.

Both company and union officials have agreed to Premier W. A. C. Bennett's settlement terms, but they are still deadlocked on a last-minute technicality.

The Office Workers' International Union will withdraw its pickets if MacMillan, Bledsoe and Powell River Co. will drop its legal action for a government order that other unions cease their tieup of company operations.

The company will withdraw its legal action if the union calls off its pickets.

PICK UP MARBLES

Deputy Labor Minister W. H. Sands was trying to solve the deadlock in meetings still under way at Vancouver at press time.

Mr. Bennett, meanwhile, called on the company to give in.

"When the game is over you pick up your marbles and go home," he said. But there was no reply.

The premier's settlement ultimatum issued Monday night was accepted by company chairman J. V. Clyne without conditions.

TWO CONDITIONS

William Lowe, representative of the union, accepted with two conditions: that the company halt its legal action before the provincial labor relations board and that the union membership votes for it.

In practice, it has taken Canada several decades to assume all the attributes of sovereignty and now, nearly 100 years later, some problems are still unsolved.

NOT AN END TO PROBLEMS

Pearson said that if in this context he could make an observation based on Canadian experience it would be that the assumption by a country of the final powers over its own problems does not necessarily simplify or end those problems.

NATIONAL Hydro Bond Issue

VANCOUVER (CP)—

British Columbia today launched a three-river power policy.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced that the federal government will be asked "forthwith" to share in the cost of a multi-million-dollar flood control project on the upper reaches of the Fraser River.

He said dams constructed under the project would be capable of generating hydroelectric power. The area was capable of generating one million horsepower.

Despite heavy criticism in the past, the government has worked on a two-river policy—simultaneous development of the Peace and Columbia Rivers for hydroelectric power. Now Mr. Bennett has added a third river. Total cost of all projects is in the billions.

He said the request for federal aid will be made on the basis of a report earlier this year from the Fraser River Board—a federal-provincial body—which called for a $396 million flood control system that would involve eight dams and a diversion of the Upper Fraser.

PROTECT VALLEY

He said the flood control measures are necessary to protect the 100-mile Fraser Valley on the Lower Mainland which eventually "will be the most expensive bit of real estate in all Canada."

He said under B.C. proposals the federal and provincial governments would share the cost of the flood control features of the project with the balance charged to hydro development.

The system would be designed to prevent flooding such as that in 1948 when $30,000,000 damage was done by the rampaging Fraser.

Mr. Bennett made his announcement at a government breakfast meeting of the B.C. Investment Dealers Association that the four-year bonds will pay five per cent and there will be a limit of $10,000 worth per customer.

He also announced the ceremonial burning of $90,000,000 of paid-up B.C. Toll Highways and Bridges Authority bonds.

The ceremony, to be held here Aug. 1, would be similar to one held in 1959 at Kelowna when the premier announced that the province was free of direct debt.

The premier said that $36,500,000 worth of Toll Bridge bonds were due Aug. 1. The government had the cash on hand to pay these off.

Parity bonds are government guaranteed bonds cashable at par at any time.

Mr. Bennett said the new $50,000,000 issue will take the government above its self-imposed limit of $212,000,000 in parities which are issued by crown agencies, not the government. The total would amount to almost $238,000,000.

However, refunding of bonds issued to pay for the B.C. Electric Company, expropriated in 1961, would bring the total parity bonds down to about $200,000,000 next year.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, chairman of Hydro said the annual report of the Authority will be issued Thursday. However, a fact sheet issued in connection with the bond issue said that the authority had a net income of $8,848,895 for the year ending March 31. Gross revenues were $139,632,801.

One of this corner's junior scouts decided the other day that his brush cut was a millimetre too long at the sides, and in a spirit of youthful adventure, set out to hunt up a new barber.

After considerable window-shopping, he found an operator to his taste, a comb-and-scissors expert who combined dash and assurance with an artist's finesse.

Our fellow checked in, and presently mounted the chair. Until the ultimate last moment, all went very well. Then with a flourish, the barber reached a bottle from his counter and anointed the finished trim, which began to foam.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the barber, "but I'm afraid we got the wrong bottle, heh-heh-heh. This one seems to be shampoo."

Since he couldn't send our lad-about-town frothing into the street, he then proceeded to make amends with shampoo, rinse, hair-drying and scalp-pummeled to the tune of $4.50, on the house.

He also entertained with tales of other tonsorial contremps, one of which involved a new chum from Europe and his first Canadian customer.

This barber, an artist who had coifed any number of distinguished Continental heads, administered a standard European brush out.

His patron inspected the finished job. "Too long on top," was his verdict. "I want a brush cut."

The maestro, considerably flustered, set to again. But his timing was shot, and as he worked his way up the back, his scissors skidded under the comb and snipped to the skin.

For an instant he stared in horror. Then the years of hovering over Old World diplomats came to his rescue. Delicately, he neated up around the disaster area.

"Sir," he observed as he reached for a bottle—the right one—"are you aware that here at the back is a small bare switch?"

"Must have sneaked up on me," his customer said. He groped and frowned. "What should I do about it?"

"We will watch it," said the barber, "but I see no cause for worry." He administered a last judicious rub. "There are signs that the hair has begun to sprout again."

After first-nighting a succession of high-budget but mediocre films that culminated in an expensive floperoo titled Cleopatra, Win and I decided that nothing less than an earth-shaker would coax us farther afield than the Oak Bay with its sturdy comedies.

In consequence, we remained stubbornly cool while friends told us we really ought to shake loose and go see Tom Jones at the Capitol.

This we refused to do until a sedate couple old enough to know better dissolved into semi-coherent sputters while briefing us on the picture.

So we went, grumbling; and now, between sputters of our own, urge anyone of a right and proper age to catch Tom Jones while it and he are still in town.

Luckily the English, who have a gift for hearty, earthy humor, bagged Henry Fielding's novel of eighteenth century England before Hollywood got around to it. The resulting picture is a cross-country gallop that tramples the proprieties along with the chickens through one outrageously entertaining scene after another.

Tom Jones is gigantic, stupendous, super-colossal, and if I could plug it with an even more florid superlative, I'd gladly do so.

But no plug today for Victoria City, which having built an attractive and functional parking palace on View Street, is dammably slow in catching up with an early Edison invention that gives off a reassuring brilliance when a switch is flipped.

The 11:30 blackness at either end of the lower parking level is enough to scare the pants off Dracula, let alone citizens groping carward with their wives after a late show.

Lights, gentlemen, lights! We have too many of these murky holes in our downtown area.

Centre Assured Despite Plodding

By JOHN MIKA

City Hall officials now feel that the senior citizens' recreational centre will be built after all—with little thanks to the beneficiaries themselves.

Indications today are that the painfully slow campaign by various groups representing the retired class will come close to its $60,000 target.

Officially, $25,000 has been collected so far—almost half by the youngsters—but unofficial figures boost this by $10,000.

Appeals are going to several wealthy persons to pull the campaign through and there are indications that they will.

BIDS IN AUGUST

"We now hope and expect to be able to call for tenders in August so this building can be put up as a winter works project," a city official said.

If the hope is realized it will soothe some feelings that the city was led down a garden path by a barrage of demands from all sorts of senior citizen groups in recent years for a central recreation centre to supplement neighborhood centres.

Aldermen, particularly at election time, frequently were bombarded with criticisms and were told if only they provided leadership, a fund campaign would go over the top.

There is no expectation that will happen now but city officials have their fingers crossed that the campaign committee can at least get within shooting distance of its target so that there is some justification for proceeding with the centre this fall.

BUT POOR BRUIN IS DEAD

Kill or Capture Argument Goes On

A black bear which roamed the Saanich Peninsula for three days after first being sighted at Beaver Lake was killed Tuesday, but a controversy surrounding its life was on.

Four shells fired by Nanaimo cougar hunter Jim Décar cut down the 100-pound bear at 2 p.m. near a berry farm owned by G. P. Arnaud, 6432 Patricia Bay Highway south of Keating Cross Road.

The body was immediately buried in a sawdust pit on the farm.

While the bear's remaining time on earth grew shorter as the clock ticked through Tuesday morning, two warring factions began to emerge.

One was comprised of housewives of Saanich, demanding that the bear be shot.

The other was made up of conservationists, demanding the bear be spared.

Both bombarded the Game Department with their telephone calls.

REPRIEVE NOT GRANTED

As the hunter and his dogs were stalking the bear SPCA secretary manager David Beeching tried to obtain a one-day reprieve for the bruin until a tranquilizer dart-gun could be shipped over from Vancouver.

He was told that the hunt would continue and that the tranquilizer would be used on its arrival if the bear had not been shot in the meantime.

But the bear was sighted well before the tranquilizer gun could be obtained, and the animal was shot.

The bear had molested no one during his three-day visit to civilization.

He had followed three berry-pickers down a road until being scared off, had eaten part of a strawberry patch and had torn up some nearby hallocks.

SAFETY FIRST

Provincial game department Inspector Bob Sinclair said he regretted having to kill the animal, but that there was no alternative.

"You just don't know what a wild animal will do," he said. "Suppose a child had gotten in its way; then where would we be?"

It was argued by those supporting the shooting that even if the bear had been drugged and returned to its natural habitat, it would again wander down to civilized areas because of memories of easy food.

Opposed to the shooting were employees of Rudy's Pet Park who said today that they had facilities for another bear and could have accepted the Saanichton bruin if it had been drugged.

Also opposed was highly placed game branch official who said before word of the killing reached him "I'm sick to death of the Victorian attitude that insists on killing every poor, harmless, wild creature that dares to show its nose on this peninsula."

"If the people who have been keeping our phones busy hollering for the bear's blood would just hold off, we could deal humanely with this situation."

"But the pressure for a shooting is simply too heavy."

Lawyers Battle Over Witnesses

Stormy Opening For Death Probe

Witnesses were excluded despite protests at the stormy start today of a special coroner's inquest into the death in March of a city nursing home patient.

Mrs. Jessie Charlton Little, 85, a patient for four months at Glengarry Private Hospital, 1780 Fairfield Road, died the day after she was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital with a broken arm.

The inquest, under coroner Edmond J. de St. Jorre, was called by the attorney-general's department on a Supreme Court order from Mr. Justice T. W. Brown.

The previous coroner, Dr. J. H. Moore, had conducted an informal inquiry shortly after the death and filed his report with the A-G's office.

Counsel for the private hospital, David Hummel, at the outset of the inquest applied to have some six to eight witnesses—mostly employees of the hospital—present when evidence was given by the 15 persons subpoenaed by police to attend.

Mr. Hummel made it clear he was not representing the employees at the inquest.

EXCLUDE ALL

Mr. St. Jorre said he intended to exclude all witnesses until each was called to give his own testimony.

Counsel for the deceased's family, George Gregory, said he proposed to call Mr. Hummel as a witness and he should therefore be excluded with the others.

After 40 minutes of disagreement, in which Mr. Hummel said he would also ask for Mr. Gregory to be subpoenaed, Mr. St. Jorre excluded witnesses and adjourned the hearing to 2 p.m. at a different location.

CRAMPED ROOM

The hearing opened in a 15 by 20-foot room in Victoria city police station.

Thirty-four persons including press and officials crammed in with a 10-foot table and 33 chairs, leaving other interested persons standing in the hallway.

Arrangements were made to resume at the RCMP court room in the Law Courts building.

Mr. Hummel said that any person deeming himself affected by the proceedings has the right to be present as witness and are cross-examined. This is provided for in the Coroner's Act.

HIS RIGHT

Mr. St. Jorre said he has the right to exclude witnesses and any persons wishing to be present could be represented by counsel.

"If they are excluded," said Mr. Hummel referring to 13 persons who stood when requested by Mr. St. Jorre, "it would be in contravention of section 23 (of the Coroner's Act)."

"You can't have it both ways. Either you are representing them, or you are not," Mr. St. Jorre told him.

"I think Mr. Hummel should be treated as the other witnesses," Mr. Gregory put in.

VICIOUS THING

"Mr. Gregory well knows I have no personal knowledge of this death and if he seeks to remove me as counsel to find out in the first few questions that I have no knowledge . . . it is highly improper and a vicious thing to do," Mr. Hummel said.

"That is regrettable, and you shouldn't speak of another member of the bar like that," the coroner said.

Mr. Hummel said he had investigated the matter on behalf of Glengarry Private Hospital Ltd. "for months and spent thousands of dollars of the corporation's money on it."

If counsel insisted on calling each other as witnesses, then Mr. St. Jorre would have to arrange for subpoenas and counsel would have to appoint other lawyers, the coroner said, granting the adjournment for counsel to consider the matter.

"I suggest Mr. Hummel is as wrong as he is rude," Mr. Gregory said. "What he said to people who are not his clients may certainly be of some assistance to the inquest."

And Now It's the Piggy-Back 'Totemotel'

"Daddy, I wanna go upstairs and sleep."

"That's fine dear. Turn off the water in the sink on your way up, will you please?"

Hardly the conversation one would expect to hear in a station wagon travelling down a freeway, but quite possible in the station wagon driven by Ken Greening of Van Neys, California.

Riding piggy-back on his late-model wagon is a "totemotel," a fibreglass unit which rests on the tailgate and opens into the wagon's interior.

Yet it weighs only 365 pounds.

It's streamlined too, making the wagon look like a pleasure cruiser, and virtually eliminates drag.

The unit is not yet available in Canada, but sells for about $1,400 in the U.S.A.

Mr. Greening likes the totemotel so much he may open a dealership in his own town.

Arthur Mayse

One of this corner's junior scouts decided the other day that his brush cut was a millimetre too long at the sides, and in a spirit of youthful adventure, set out to hunt up a new barber.

After considerable window-shopping, he found an operator to his taste, a comb-and-scissors expert who combined dash and assurance with an artist's finesse.

Our fellow checked in, and presently mounted the chair. Until the ultimate last moment, all went very well. Then with a flourish, the barber reached a bottle from his counter and anointed the finished trim, which began to foam.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the barber, "but I'm afraid we got the wrong bottle, heh-heh-heh. This one seems to be shampoo."

Since he couldn't send our lad-about-town frothing into the street, he then proceeded to make amends with shampoo, rinse, hair-drying and scalp-pummel to the tune of $4.50, on the house.

He also entertained with tales of other tonsorial contredépôts, one of which involved a new chum from Europe and his first Canadian customer.

This barber, an artist who had coiffed any number of distinguished Continental heads, administered standard European brush cut.

His patron inspected the finished job. "Too long on top," was his verdict. "I want a shorter cut."

The maestro, considerably flustered, set to again. But his timing was shot, and as he worked his way up the back, his scissors skidded under the comb and snipped to the skin.

For an instant he stared in horror. Then the years of hovering over Old World diplomats came to his rescue. Deliberately, he neared up around the disaster area.

"Sir," he observed as he reached for a bottle—the right one—"are you aware that here at the back is, a small bare spot?"

"Must have sneaked up on me," his customer said. He groaned and frowned. "What should I do about it?"

"We will watch it," said the barber, "but I see no cause for worry." He administered a last judicious rub. "There are signs that the hair has begun to sprout again."

After first-nighting a succession of high-budget but mediocre films that culminated in an expensive floperoo titled Cleopatra, Win and I decided that nothing less than an earth-shaker would coax us farther afield than the Oak Bay with its sturdy comedies.

In consequence, we remained stubbornly cool while friends told us we really ought to shake loose and go see Tom Jones at the Capitol.

This we refused to do until a sedate couple old enough to know better dissolved into semi-coherent sputters while briefing us on the picture.

So we went, grumbling; and now, between sputters of our own, urge anyone of a right and proper age to catch Tom Jones while it and he are still in town.

Luckily the English, who have a gift for hearty, earthy humor, bagged Henry Fielding's novel of eighteenth century England before Hollywood got around to it. The resulting picture is a cross-country gallop that tramples the proprieties along with the chickens through one outrageously entertaining scene after another.

Tom Jones is gigantic, stupendous, super-colossal, and if I could pluck it with an even more florid superlative, I'd gladly do so.

But no plug today for Victoria City, which having built an attractive and functional parking palace on View Street, is dammably slow in catching up with an early Edison invention that gives off a reassuring brilliance when a switch is flipped.

The 11:30 blackness at either end of the lower parking level is enough to scare the pants off Dracula, let alone citizens groping carward with their wives after a late show.

Lights, gentlemen, lights! We have too many of these murky holes in our downtown area.

Centre Assured Despite Plodding

By JOHN MIKA

City Hall officials now feel that the senior citizens' recreational centre will be built after all—with little thanks to the beneficiaries themselves.

Indications today are that the painfully slow campaign by various groups representing the retired class will come close to its $60,000 target.

The campaign to raise the user's relatively minor share of a $200,000 project began early this year but dragged so much that some civic officials privately expressed fears the building would have to be abandoned.

Most of the cost for the multi-purpose development to provide services ranging from hobby craft rooms and equipment to reading rooms—will be paid for by the city and provincial government.

If the hope is realized it will soothe some feelings that the city was led down a garden path by a barrage of demands from all sorts of senior citizen groups in recent years for a central recreation centre to supplement neighborhood centres.

Aldermen, particularly at election time, frequently were bombarded with criticisms and were told if only they provided leadership, a fund campaign would go over the top.

It was pointed out that some 25,000 senior citizens in the Greater Victoria area would be able to use the building as their own facility and only a $2 donation from each would assure success.

A three-and-one-half-year-old boy is in fairly good condition today after being struck by a car when he ran across Fernwood Road Tuesday afternoon.

Jose Manuel de Lima, 2612 Fernwood, received head injuries in the accident. Police said he ran across the street just north of Hautain and was hit by a car driven by Douglas Loffey, 1514 Clawthorpe.

Mark Simmons, 2519 Ludgate, a four-year-old boy struck by a car near his home Monday, is reported to be slightly improved today.

He suffered serious injuries and was reported at first in critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

BUT POOR BRUIN IS DEAD

Kill or Capture Argument Goes On

A black bear which roamed the Saanich Peninsula for three days after first being sighted at Beaver Lake was killed Tuesday, but a controversy surrounding its life spans on.

Four shells fired by Nanaimo cougar hunter Jim Dewar cut down the 100-pound bear Tuesday afternoon—near a berry farm owned by G. P. Arnaud, 6432 Patricia Bay Highway south of Keating Cross Road.

The body was immediately buried in a sawdust pit on the farm.

While the bear's remaining time on earth grew shorter as the clock ticked through Tuesday morning, two warring factions began to emerge.

One was comprised of housewives of Saanich, demanding that the bear be shot.

The other was made up of conservationists, demanding the bear be spared.

Both bombarded the Game Department with their telephone calls.

REPRIEVE NOT GRANTED

As the hunter and his dogs were stalking the bear SPCA secretary manager David Beeching tried to obtain a one-day reprieve for the bruin until a tranquilizer dart-gun could be shipped over from Vancouver.

He was told that the hunt would continue and that the tranquilizer would be used on its arrival if the bear had not been shot in the meantime.

But the bear was sighted well before the tranquilizer gun could be obtained, and the animal was shot.

The bear had molested no one during his three-day visit to civilization.

He had followed three berry-pickers down a road until being scared off, had eaten part of a strawberry patch and had torn up some nearby looks.

SAFETY FIRST

Provincial game department inspector Bob Sinclair said he regretted having to kill the animal, but that there was no alternative.

"You just don't know what a wild animal will do," he said. "Suppose a child had gotten in its way; then where would we be?"

It was argued by those supporting the shooting that even if the bear had been drugged and returned to its natural habitat, it would again wander down to civilized areas because of memories of easy food.

Appeals are going to several wealthy persons to pull the campaign through and there are indications that they will.

BIDS IN AUGUST

"We now hope and expect to be able to call for tenders in August so this building can be put up as a winter works project," a city official said.

If the hope is realized it will soothe some feelings that the city was led down a garden path by a barrage of demands from all sorts of senior citizen groups in recent years for a central recreation centre to supplement neighborhood centres.

Two youths were seen by a nearby resident taking the suitcases from a car in the lot at Bel Isle Motel, 427 Belleville Street. They got into a car driven by a third person.

By the time police arrived the youths had left the scene. The thieves started to discard the clothing a short distance away.

Police followed a trail of clothing scattered along Quebec, Menzies, Kingston, Montreal, Dallas, Lansdowne and Quadra Streets. The trail ended near View Street.

Vandals broke into nine cars parked at Regent Towers, Michigan Street, overnight.

FRUSTRATED

The membership is frustrated. There have been only three direct negotiating meetings between the parties since March 8. One of those was with the conciliation officer.

"The men have been without a new contract for four months."

Bricklayers were the only union not seeking parity with Vancouver.

Basic Vancouver rate (in effect north of Cobble Hill) is $3.62, and by April 1, 1965 it will be $3.78.

Contractor Gilbert Brown said the demands were "too much for us."

HIS RIGHT

Mr. St. Jorre said he has the right to exclude witnesses and any persons wishing to be present at the hearing.

Arrangements were made to resume at the Law Courts building.

"Mr. Hummel said that any person deeming himself affected by the proceedings has the right to be present as witness to give evidence and be cross-examined. This is provided for in the Coroner's Act."

HIS LEFT

Mr. St. Jorre said he has the right to exclude witnesses and any persons wishing to be present at the hearing.

"I think Mr. Hummel should be treated as the other witness," Mr. Gregory put in.

"VICIOUS THING"

"Mr. Gregory well knows I have no personal knowledge of this death and if he seeks to remove me as counsel just to find out in the first few questions that I have no knowledge... it is highly improper and a vicious thing to do," Mr. Hummel said.

"That is regrettable, and you shouldn't speak of another member of the bar like that," the coroner said.

Mr. Hummel said he had investigated the matter on behalf of Glenarry Private Hospital Ltd. "for months and spent thousands of dollars of the corporation's money on it."

If counsel insisted on calling each other as witnesses, then Mr. St. Jorre would have to arrange for subpoenas and counsel would have to appoint other lawyers, the coroner said.

Rhodesia Issue High On Agenda

LONDON (CP)—The Southern Rhodesian question got high priority on the agenda of the Commonwealth prime ministers conference which opened here today.

Delegation sources said the Southern Rhodesian problem, the key issue for most of the seven African countries at the conference, was given second place only to a discussion of international affairs.

Formal discussions among the Commonwealth leaders, which were being held behind closed doors, began this afternoon.

Ghanian President Kwame Nkrumah issued a statement earlier this week saying Britain had an inescapable responsibility to ensure that a majority government was established in Southern Rhodesia.

Britain has in effect refused to grant Southern Rhodesia independence while the white minority government of the self-governing colony refuses to grant voting rights to the African population.

British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Hamilton, with Canada, Australia and New Zealand—wanted a complete reappraisal of what the modern Commonwealth means based on his ideas for closer economic ties and expanded technical aid.

During the morning meeting the leaders of the Commonwealth approved the admission of Malawi, raising the membership of the Commonwealth to 18.

Douglas-Hamilton welcomed the leaders at Marlborough House, the first conference since September, 1962.

Liberty Not End Of Woes

By JOSEPH MACSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Canada's Lester Pearson told the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers today Canadian experience has shown that independence in itself does not necessarily simplify a country's problems.

Britain has in effect refused to grant Southern Rhodesia independence while the white minority government of the self-governing colony refuses to grant voting rights to the African population.

THREE-RIVER PLAN NOW FOR B.C.

WORK FRIDAY?

Alberni On Verge Of Accord

By FRANK RUTTER
The Alberni Valley strike today teetered on the verge of a settlement that would put the lumber industry into full production again on Friday.

Both company and union officials have agreed to Premier W. A. C. Bennett's settlement terms, but they are still deadlocked on a last-minute technicality.

The Office Workers' International Union will withdraw its pickets if MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co. will drop its legal action for a government order that other unions cease their tieup of company operations.

The company will withdraw its legal action if the union calls off its pickets.

PICK-UP MARBLES'

Deputy Labor Minister W. H. Sands was trying to solve the deadlock in meetings still under way at Vancouver at press time.

Mr. Bennett, meanwhile, called on the company to give in.

"When the game is over you pick up your marbles and go home," he said. But there was no reply.

The premier's settlement ultimatum issued Monday night was accepted by company chairman J. V. Clyne without condition.

TWO CONDITIONS

William Lowe, representative of the union, accepted with two conditions: that the company halt its legal action before the provincial labor relations board and that the union membership votes for it.

He said he could assemble the 60 striking office workers and complete a vote within a matter of hours.

Company officials said today that the Alberni Valley plants could be back in full production within 36 hours of a formal settlement.

One said he expected the legal issue would be resolved later today and the pulp and paper plant at Port Alberni would be in full operation by noon Friday.

HEARING DELAYED

Labor relations board hearings on the company's charges that four unions have illegally restricted production by refusing to cross office worker picket lines were adjourned until 10 a.m. Thursday in the hope that all will be settled by then.

Mr. Sands and Mr. Lowe met most of this morning in an attempt to clear the snag.

"We are on the verge," said a company spokesman.

Mr. Clyne, after sending a telegram to the premier accepting his settlement proposals, said there should be an immediate withdrawal of pickets and everyone should return to work.

He said the premier's proposals were "in accord with the company's position throughout."

EMPLOYEES FREE

This was that freedom of employees to decide themselves if they would join the union should be maintained.

The union wanted a closed shop.

Mr. Bennett's plan was that a majority of employees must be union members, that no present union members would lose their jobs, and that all employees would pay union dues. The matter of wages would be settled by a government arbiter.

Meanwhile, despite today's snag, there was rejoicing in the Alberni Valley that the end is in sight.

There was free beer Tuesday night in Alberni beer parlors.

WING DING

Mayor Fred Bishop said there would be "a wing ding of a party" if anyone has any money left.

"YIPEE, I WON"—That's what little Laurian Wallis seems to be saying. And this delightful shot of her on the swings at Willows Beach last month gained a first prize for her father, Graham, of 3401 Browning

Big War Possible' Khrushchev Warns

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev warned today that centres of international tension—such as those in Southeast Asia—can "grow into a big conflict and even touch off a world conflagration."

The Soviet leader, speaking to military academy graduates, said dangerous situations existed in the Caribbean area, over Cuba, in Germany, and in Laos and South Vietnam in Asia. He said "the interference of aggressive imperialist powers in the affairs of Laos may kindle a war fraught with perilous consequences." The Americans have taken measures to oppose the Communist-led Pathet Lao in that strife-torn Indochinese country.

In what appeared to be an answer to charges against him from the Communist Chinese, Khrushchev pledged Soviet power to defend wars against "colonialists" and imperialists.

The Chinese have accused him of betraying revolutionary movements in underdeveloped countries by failure to support them adequately.

United Nations (AP)—Secretary-General U Thant called today for a new Geneva conference on Viet Nam. He said that "even at this late hour" a conference might offer some chance of solution to end the war in Viet Nam.

Thant told a press conference that if an agreement were worked up by the parties principally concerned, the United Nations could play a role in seeing that the agreement is carried out.

Parity bonds are government guaranteed bonds cashable at par at any time.

Mr. Bennett said the new $50,000 issue will take the government above its self-imposed limit of $212,000,000 in parities which are issued by crown agencies, not the government. The total would amount to almost $238,000,000.

However, refunding of bonds issued to pay for the B.C. Electric Company, expropriated in 1961, would bring the total parity bonds down to about $200,000 next year.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of Hydro, said the annual report of the Authority will be issued Thursday. However, a fact sheet issued in connection with the bond issue said that the authority had a net income of $8,848,895 for the year ending March 31. Gross revenues were $139,632,801.

Despite heavy criticism in the past, the government has worked on a two-river policy—simultaneous development of the Peace and Columbia Rivers for hydro-electric power. Now Mr. Bennett has added a third river. Total cost of all projects is in billions.

He said dams constructed under the project would be capable of generating hydroelectric power. The area was capable of generating one million horsepower.

He said dams constructed under the project would be capable of generating hydroelectric power. The area was capable of generating one million horsepower.

He said under B.C. proposals the federal and provincial governments would share the cost of the flood control features of the project with the balance charged to hydro development.

The system would be designed to prevent flooding such as that in 1948 when $30,000,000 damage was done by the rampaging Fraser.

Mr. Bennett made his announcement at a government breakfast given for the B.C. Investment Dealers Association where he announced a $50 million parity bond issue by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority.

He said there would be no dams on the lower Fraser River, upon which much of the province's multi-million dollar salmon industry is partially dependent.

Preliminary discussions had already been held with the federal government and "now we want the talks to get into high gear." The federal government would be expected to pay 50 per cent of the flood control aspects of the project.

Mr. Bennett said that there had been a feeling abroad that the government was "gambling" with its two-river power policy.

ISRAEL ASKS UN AID IN SYRIA INCIDENTS

JERUSALEM (UPI)—Israel has instructed its representative at the United Nations to request Secretary-General Thant's intervention in the "grave situation" along this country's border with Syria, government officials said today.

They said Ambassador Michael Comay planned to ask Thant to call on Syria to halt a series of border incidents in which six Israelis have been wounded by gunfire since last Thursday. The shooting came from Syrian border positions, it was charged.

Hoo boy! The fish are goin' to fly along the Fraser.

At least the new members of the Commonwealth avoid one problem Mike's an expert on—they march into independence with their own flags already flyin'.

Say, isn't that happy little gal gracin' our front page a real swinger? Seems like even her toes are smilin'.

OL' VIC SAYS:

Chief UN delegate Nikoll T. Fedorenko of Russia invited U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson and British Ambassador Sir Patrick Dean to the Soviet mission to receive the memorandum.

Stevenson later told reporters that at first glance the memorandum contained nothing new beyond what had been announced in Tokyo. He said the document is long and will require considerable study. Dean expressed the same view.

Fedorenko later told reporters the proposal is a "positive, cognstructive, or if you prefer, creative approach to the problem. A government position of great importance." He gave no details.

U.S. officials still are puzzled

by the fact that the note was presented first to Japan and made public
